

Pentagon Explains as War Foes Cry Foul

From LAT, UPI, AP

The Johnson administration moved quickly Tuesday to reassert the sincerity of its Vietnam peace gesture, in which President Johnson pledged a halt to air and navy gun attacks on all North Vietnam except an area adjacent to the demilitarized zone.

The pledge was given Sunday. Monday, carrier-based planes struck a target 205 miles north of the demilitarized zone, sparking an outburst of criticism and doubt across the United States and around the world.

Today, U.S. navy planes struck far north again, this time 12 miles north of the Monday raid and less than a mile south of the 20th parallel.

This was the reaction to the raids: ● Premier Pham Van Dong of North Vietnam said peace talks with the United States "will begin as soon as the United States has really unconditionally stopped bombing and all other acts of war against North Vietnam."

● Senator William Fulbright, a persistent Vietnam critic, said Tuesday in Washington he had been "completely mistaken about the degree of the president's objectives. This is not going to be a significant inducement to peace."

● In Los Angeles former U.S. diplomat John Kenneth Galbraith said the bombings indicated either that the peace offer was "bogus" or "the military is out of control."

● Communist North Vietnam indicated Johnson's move was not a sufficient de-escalation of the war to produce peace talks.

● Moscow Radio said Johnson was "not sincere" in his order to stop bombing North Vietnam.

● Questions were raised in Washington following Monday's raid as to whether Johnson actually had ordered a significant reduction in the level of U.S. military action.

Phil G. Goulding, assistant secretary of defence for public affairs, said this really was the case.

The president's order, he explained, forbade bombing raids above the 20th parallel, a line that runs west from the Gulf of Tonkin to the Laotian border just north of Thanh Hoa, which was the navy target

Kosygin Says

Only Way Out: End Aggression

TEHERAN (LAT) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin said Tuesday that the time had come for the United States to understand there was only one way out of Vietnam: "to cease the aggression."

Speaking at a banquet on the first day of his state visit to Iran, the Russian leader gave his first public reaction to the recent measures taken by President Johnson to de-escalate the Vietnam war. Although he did not mention Johnson's latest measures, Kosygin indicated they were not enough. (See also Page 5)

He said that "all the endeavors of the interferences have failed... the time has come for the aggressors to understand that the only way out is to cease aggression."

Deal Rumors Sweep Capital

By RON COLLISTER

OTTAWA, (Special) — Deals, deals and rumors of deals are sweeping the capital as the delegates arrive to choose the next prime minister of Canada.

Oto

Tuesday night, two important candidates, Robert Winters and Paul Martin, were closeted in an office on deserted Parliament Hill.

The meeting was suggested by Martin and took place in Winters' office.

FIAT REJECTION
Winters has flatly rejected the idea of any deals or participation in a move to stop Pierre Trudeau.

Trudeau, in three polls is shown as a strong front-runner on the first ballot.

The talk in some of the rival camps now is intended to establish, well in advance, what strategy to follow, if enough candidates believe Trudeau should be stopped.

CONSENSUS
The common theme in all the stories swamping the capital is that a stop-Trudeau attitude, if not a formal alliance, is developing.

The consensus is that most of the planning is coming from the Martin and Hellyer camps.

As the two men reported to be in second and third place, one

'Ethnic' Caucus Raised

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP has arranged a special caucus of Liberal convention delegates who are of neither French nor English extraction to discuss the question of special status for any group in Canada.

Steve Otto (York East) told a news conference Tuesday he has won approval of convention organizers to hold the caucus Thursday at 3 p.m. PST in the Coliseum, next door to the civic centre site of the convention.

He said he has obtained the names of about 250 delegates with "ethnic" names and expects 120-130 to respond to his caucus call. He is sending them this dear-delegate letter:

DESTINY ISSUE

"Of paramount importance to us is the issue of our national destiny. Shall we be one nation or two? Shall any group of Canadians be granted special status, and if so, what shall be the quality of that privilege?"

"Many of us are of the opinion that this vital question begs a clear stand from this convention and therefore, since your views on this are very important, I would be honored if you could attend a special meeting in this regard, to take part in our deliberations."

CANDIDATES WELCOME

Otto told reporters none of the leadership candidates will be invited to the caucus. However they or their representatives are welcome to attend "as observers."

He had personally questioned the "concept of two nations, special status" and in recent months had addressed ethnic organizations across Canada and sought their views.

House Group Urges New Laws

Fuel Report: Chorus of Nays

By IAN STREET

Legislative Reporter

The special committee on gasoline prices Tuesday night recommended legislation to protect non-brand dealers and outlaw gimmicks.

Government members on the floor of the House, led by Premier Bennett, shouted a chorus of "nays" when committee chairman Herb Capozzi (SC-Vancouver Centre) asked leave to move adoption of the report.

Three government members, including long-time crusader for lower gasoline prices Cyril Sheford (SC-Omineca), voted with the five opposition members on the committee to recommend legislation. A majority on the 14-member committee also voted to instruct Mr. Capozzi, as chairman, to ask for the rules to be suspended so the report could be adopted without notice, instead of merely tabling it.

Mr. Bennett later indicated the government wanted more time to study the committee's findings, but declined to say when the government might act on it, if at all.

Opposition spokesmen, however, expressed no confidence, and the NDP immediately gave notice that it would propose the report be adopted with an additional provision that a Crown corporation be set up to handle sales of gasoline to independent dealers throughout B.C.

IN DYING HOURS

This motion would normally be brought up after the required two days' notice on Thursday, but is likely to be dealt with among a number of other opposition proposals in the dying hours of the session, probably early next week.

Meanwhile, Mr. Sheford, whose efforts resulted in the appointment of the Morrow Royal Commission on gasoline prices in 1963, said he regarded the committee's report as "a good first step."

The backbencher said he would seek a meeting later today with Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Lofmark, whose department would be responsible to urge that legislation implementing the committee recommendations be brought in at this session.

"This committee report is a lot better than last year's," said

Mayor Not Amused By Town Fool's Grant

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell was not amused Tuesday when town fool Joachim Foikis pranced merrily into council chambers after winning a $3,500 Canada council grant.

"You might call this the government's mad money," said Mayor Campbell when he learned that the national council had granted money to Foikis, who dresses as a jester and amuses Vancouver's townfolk.

"An old-age pensioner, who's worked all his life for his country, gets $1,200 a year. Here's a fellow who refuses to work and they give him a $3,500 young-age pension."

The presidents of two senior pensioners' organizations said they would urge their members to make formal protests about the council grant to the town fool.

"It's the most stupid thing I've ever heard of," said President Vincent Yates of the B.C. Old Age Pensioners' Organization.

President Marguerite Smith of the B.C. Senior Citizens' Association added: "We don't like to complain about every little thing but this is going too far."

McCarthy Stock Up

MILWAUKEE, Wis.

(AP) — Senator Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota rode the anti-Vietnam war issue to a clear-cut Democratic victory over retiring President Johnson in a prestige-building torrent of votes in Tuesday's Wisconsin presidential preference primary election.

Holding steadily at 55 per cent of the Democratic total as returns mounted, McCarthy won the bulk of the state's 59-vote convention delegation to retain his place as a leader for the nomination Johnson said Sunday night he does not want.

A heavy turnout of Republicans indicated that former vice-president Richard Nixon might top the 328,393 votes he got in the 1960 Wisconsin primary.

NOMINAL FOES

In that year, when he won the party nomination, he was unopposed. In Tuesday's countdown, he had only nominal opposition from Gov. Ronald Reagan of California and perennial candidate Harold E. Stassen, a former Minnesota governor.

Presidential preference primary elections held in various states are, for the most part, tests of strength for potential party nominees. The party candidates will be chosen at the Democratic party convention in Chicago Aug. 26-30 and the Republican convention in Miami Aug. 5-9.

With 1,844 of 3,291 precincts counted in the Democratic primary, McCarthy had 289,658 votes, or 55 per cent of the party total; Johnson had 195,280, or 37 per cent.

WELL AHEAD

In the Republican balloting, with 1,831 precincts counted, Nixon had 267,590 or 80 per cent; Reagan 35,894 or 11 per cent; Stassen 19,348, or six per cent.

McCarthy forecast at a news conference that he would wind up with 55 per cent of the vote. He said he considered it "a most significant victory."

Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York, currently McCarthy's chief rival for the

Johnson Moves Swing Public

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A national American market analysis firm claimed Tuesday that President Johnson's decision not to seek re-election, combined with his announced limited de-escalation of the Vietnam war, has caused a major shift in American opinion of his war policy.

A nationwide telephone survey taken Monday by Sindlinger and Co. shows 75 per cent of those queried now believe Johnson is doing all he can to settle the war, with 11 per cent disagreeing. The rest offered no opinion.

Only days before Johnson's announcement Sunday, the same at-random survey showed that for the first time, more Americans than ever before — 43 per cent of those queried — did not believe Johnson was doing all he could to end the conflict.

At that time, March 23 through 25, 41 per cent believed he was doing all possible.

The Monday poll showed that about 46 per cent of adult Americans would support President Johnson in the November elections if his party could convince him to change his mind about running. More than 31 per cent said they would not support him, and another 22 per cent refused to answer the question.

Albert M. Sindlinger, president of the firm, said the shift in opinion since Johnson's announcement is the "most radical" he has seen during 30 years of opinion research.

Bill 33 Hurdles Last Big Barrier

The government's controversial Bill 33 passed its last major hurdle in the legislature Tuesday night as the proposed Mediation Act was approved after lengthy clause-by-clause debate in committee.

Because several sections were amended within the general framework of the bill, third reading wasn't given immediately. When the vote is finally taken in the next few days both the NDP and Liberals are expected to oppose its passage, but approval is already assured.

The major change in the bill allows the mediation commission to publish a minority report.

SIX HOURS
The committee stage, which took six hours Monday night up to adjournment of the House at 2.25 a.m. and continued for a further hour and quarter Tuesday night, had little of the fire shown in earlier debate.

The hottest exchange Tuesday night came on Section 51 which sets $1,000 penalties for individuals and $10,000 for trade unions or employers who contravene provisions of the act. There is also provision for a maximum $150 a day fine for continued offences.

These penalties are barbarous, said Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby Edmonds). He said

U.S. Senate Passes Tax Raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate Tuesday passed the 10 per cent tax increase that President Johnson has been trying to get since last August and tied it to an enforced $6,000,000,000 cut in government spending.

But the income tax increase — Johnson called it a surcharge — must now be approved by the house, whose members show very little more enthusiasm for it than they did when it was proposed.

Lengthy Daffodil For Flower Child

IT HAD TO HAPPEN: It was a copper-bottomed, safe-as-houses bet that we would get more items about long daffodils. For those who have just joined us, Daisy Walker let us know Sunday she had grown a daffodil 31 inches long.

Tuesday there was a pleasant note from Mrs. Robert Powell, and taped to a yardstick was her effort — just a little better than 37 inches.

Mrs. Powell reports the flower was raised from bulbs that have been in the ground unlifted for 10 years.

Colonist book reviewer E. D. Ward-Harris has the bloom in water and plans to present it to a super-hippie flower-type person.

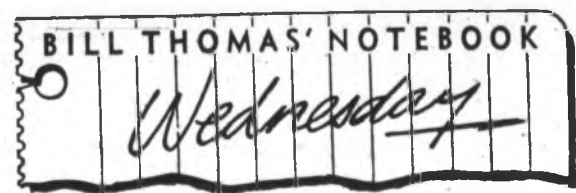

OUR AGENT REPORTS: Underground films are a special art form. To sum up the happenings here over the weekend, Colonist staffer John Hoggins, a keen amateur filmmaker, offers this report.

"Chris Crawley was a happy man Sunday evening. He had launched his first evening of underground films in the Nine in the Fifth Place, and the 2½ hours of experimental movies indicated that their future screenings will have a big following.

"He had expected about 80 to attend, but by the time the first film rolled off the reel, there were something like 150 enthusiasts.

"The program was interesting. The trouble with underground films is that they have acquired a reputation of being nothing more than 'feisty pictures'.

"This is ridiculous. True, Edward Emshwiller's Relativity contained some erotic footage, but it was so tastefully done that it would be difficult for anyone to take offence.

"The most striking thing about the films in their technical accomplishment. Photography, editing and lighting in most were excellent.

"Relativity, for instance, has some of the most lyrical camera work I have seen for a long time. That's the thing about these underground movies. Like modern art and music, even if you don't get the message, you can sit back and enjoy the blending of color and tempo.

"There was a lemon, though. That was David Bieastock's Nothing Happened This Morning. He need not have bothered, for nothing happened in the film, either.

Apart from some skilled editing tricks, the shots of a man getting up, shaving and interlaced impressions of his emotions and thoughts really didn't amount to anything.

"The cinema relies on movement for its purpose, and some of the shots were a regression to the early days of film-making when it hadn't occurred to producers that the camera can be moved from one place to another for different angles.

"The evening was worthwhile even if just for the opportunity of seeing Portrait of Lydia by John Stratton. This was animation at its best. It was a short film but many hours of hard and talented work lay behind it. The audience obviously found it outstanding, for it was the only one which drew spontaneous applause.

"Chris Crawley plans to present a program every second Sunday. He should be congratulated for his initiative. These films will provide an instructive and emotion-packed evening out.

"The audience on Sunday was composed mainly of young people. One can only hope that older people will make the effort to see them. The messages are not for youth alone. Many will doubtless be for everyone.

"The program was also presented on Monday."

LATE NIGHT SCENE: The Old Forge has Judy Ginn back, large as life and twice as beautiful. The new improved sound system was acting up opening night, but it seems safe to predict she will wow the clients for her 14-week stay. She plans to offer complete changes in program as the weeks pass.

The Red Lion has the perennial Eleanor Collins, who is just about the smoothest there is.

Miss Collins makes everything she sings or does seem so easy, and she is a delight to hear. Her material is varied and her natural warmth fills the room.

The presence of these two talents has put the crowd to the test. They are shutting back and forth to catch the shows, and it's well worth the effort.

Diabetes Strikes Slim, Fat

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: My sister is 48 and has been advised that she has diabetes, following a loss of 30 pounds. She was not obese to begin with, and this loss has left her quite thin. Yet I understood that diabetes was prevalent in overweight people. She is not taking diabetes tablets. How long does it take for diabetes to be under control and will it be possible for her to regain some of this weight despite no sweets in her diet?—N.R.

It is true that many diabetics have been overweight prior to discovering their disorder, but that does not mean that only obese people get diabetes.

Whether the obesity is principally a contributing factor, or whether it is partly a result of tendency to develop diabetes is somewhat beside the point.

Perhaps it may be a combination.

Loss of weight is one symptom of diabetes, but not one of the early symptoms. Your sister doubtless had other symptoms, such as thirst, urinary frequency, and perhaps others, without recognizing their significance.

Anyway, the disease is characterized by an inability to utilize sugar, and sugar "spills over" into the urine and is lost. These lost calories partly explain the loss of weight in an uncontrolled case of diabetes.

When your sister's case is finally under control, she may well gain back some of the weight she lost—I have known instances in which a patient, with the diabetes controlled, gained as much as a pound a day for a time.

However, plumpness or corpulence are not synonymous with health so—guided by her physician—your sister may or may not find it to her advantage to regain all her lost 30 pounds. Rather, renewed strength and vigor are the important considerations.

How long does it take to achieve control? Impossible to say in advance, because it depends on the individual's characteristics, the time that has passed before treatment started, and how well the patient follows instructions.

Jet Raids Shrink 'Peace Zone'

Monday only four hours after Johnson spoke.

The president had in his order placed "most of the territory" and 90 per cent of North Vietnam's citizens in a bomb-free zone.

Many, including Fulbright, assumed the president was restricting bombing to a small area immediately north of the demilitarized zone.

It developed that while this was generally so, targets still authorized can reach above Thanh Hoa.

They are targets where, as Johnson said, "the continuing enemy build up directly threatens allied forward positions and where the movements of their troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat."

Goulding said, however, that so far "90 per cent of the sorties (since Johnson spoke) have been within 60 miles of the zone while only 2.3 per cent were against targets in the Thanh Hoa area."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said Johnson wanted to ban the bombing of North Vietnam about 75 miles south of Hanoi — at the 20th parallel — but was talked out of drawing a specific line by the state department.

Officials of that department felt that by setting a specific limit U.S. fliers would have been unable to attack supply dumps and troop concentrations if the North Vietnamese moved them just across an arbitrary line.

Fulbright appealed to Johnson to "clarify" the language of his bombing order but at the same time added that there had been confirmation that the bombing of the last 48 hours was in line with the order.

"If it doesn't mean anything," he said, "it is only a limited reduction — then it is a very tragic thing because then I don't know how North Vietnam can respond."

"If this opportunity is missed there is no choice but to go all the way down to an all-out nuclear war," Fulbright said.

The "bogus" protest by Galbraith, Harvard economist and chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action, expressed the dismay and rage of political liberals at the new air strikes.

They also, said Galbraith, believed the president meant an area much closer to the demilitarized zone, and saw in this a step toward de-escalation of the war and a move for peace.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk meanwhile warned U.S. allies in the Far East of "more hard fighting" if North Vietnam ignored or rejected Johnson's peace overture.

His warning came at the opening session of the council of ministers conference of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization — a meeting boycotted for the second year by France.

In North Vietnamese reaction, first response to Johnson's move came in the official army newspaper Quang Doi Nhan Dan, according to the Soviet news agency Tass, which said Johnson "is still looking for ways and means of misleading public opinion and does not agree to stop the bombing."

Even Allied diplomats were critical of the raid, terming it ill-timed and ill-advised.

Communist diplomats in London said the Thanh Hoa raids, 80 miles south of Hanoi, had "gravely prejudiced" the chance of negotiations.

Even Allied diplomats were critical of the raid, terming it ill-timed and ill-advised.

How did the Canadians capture Western Airlines without a struggle?

It was planned that way. Six years before Western began to fly into Vancouver, we sent John Lee to your city as District Sales Manager.

John fell in love with British Columbia and its people.

Later, Canadian Ken Scott, who had been with Western Airlines for 17 years, was appointed our Vancouver Station Manager.

Last year, these men hired a group of friendly, efficient, talented Canadians. To form the nucleus of a team that would serve all of Western Canada out of greater Vancouver. They are serving now.

And now Western offers daily nonstop jet service from Vancouver to Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland. Plus through-jet flights to Las Vegas, San Diego and Phoenix.

Our team (although only a few could break away for this picture) continues to grow.

They're all friendly. All efficient. All talented. And all Canadian.

Except John Lee; but then nobody's perfect.

French for Forces

A NUMBER OF DEVELOPMENTS gives rise to the uncomfortable feeling that in the adoption of a policy of soft answers which allegedly turn away wrath Canadians may have created for themselves an image of weakness.

In the diplomatic pursuit of our political aims inside the country perhaps we have shown too great a readiness to comply with what we believe to be the reasonable aspirations in Quebec.

Small surrenders can lead to great defeats, and it is permissible to wonder whether there should not be a firm line beyond which we should not retreat in the defence of Canadian federalism.

General Charles de Gaulle has long since brushed aside the federal concept for Canada. He considers it, as Alan Harvey wrote recently in The Ottawa Journal, "an artificial creation doomed to split apart."

Reflecting something of the same attitude, Mr. Leopold Senghor, president of Senegal, came here two years ago to invite participation by Canada, but particularly Quebec, in an association of French language states popularly known as a "French Commonwealth."

Senegal is a former French colony, among those to benefit from a promised $40,000,000 in Canadian government grants over the next few years, announced immediately after the Liberal administration decided to cut back on health services to our own native races.

On Tuesday the department of national defence announced the designation of certain land, sea and air force components as predominantly French-Canadian. The net result, said Mr. Leo Cadieux, minister of defence, would be to make the forces "more attractive" to French-Canadian youths.

Once again the federal government is experimenting in a highly sensitive field. The unification of the services has resulted in a loss of skilled officers and men whose effects still cannot be calculated. At Esquimaux alone, during the past two months of decision following proclamation of the unification measure, 106 naval men have quit because of opposition to it.

These are additional, of course, to those leaving on expiration of their terms of enlistment or those discharged for medical or other reasons.

Now Mr. Cadieux has embarked upon another program likely to be equally divisive. He himself says it will have, as one result, the widening of bilingualism. But should this be the function of the military establishment? Efficiency should be the first consideration even if it means depriving those who have not two languages of the opportunity of service.

We have in the composition of the army a splendid French-speaking regiment, the Royal 22nd, with two battalions at Valcartier barracks in Quebec, and another with the NATO force in West Germany. By all means let us have another such regiment. But the concept of French-speaking naval vessels and air squadrons, and the 20 per cent participation of English-speaking complement with an equal proportion of French-speaking people in the predominantly English units, seems to be a complication of organization likely to lead to difficulties, dangers and even disruption for a military organization that functioned very effectively before the political fingers started poking it about.

Poor Guesswork

THERE HAS BEEN, is, and will long continue to be considerable speculation in both the United States and abroad as to the real reason behind President Lyndon Johnson's decision not to run for a further term in the White House.

Inasmuch as his announcement was a momentous one having an immediate and significant effect on national and international relationships it is not unreasonable that politicians and pundits alike should find his action a valid—to say nothing of verdant—field for knowledgeable conjecture.

However, a matter which still offers little, if any, scope for responsible or intelligent exegesis is whether or not Mr. Johnson is prepared at this time to personally endorse any of his party's presidential candidates as his successor.

To suggest that he is ready to give Senator Robert Kennedy his immediate presidential blessing for the job simply because he has agreed to meet with the senator—at the senator's request—is guesswork at its worst.

Mount Douglas Park

THE SUM of money spent annually by Victoria City on the maintenance of its Mount Douglas Park is small, the park being mostly in its natural state. But even if it were on principle alone, there would be good reason for Victoria to ask Saanich to take over the park, as suggested by Mayor Hugh Stephen.

When the province gave the property to the city in 1885 for "the use, recreation and enjoyment of the public," it was in unorganized territory. Victoria was the only municipality in the region.

But for the 62 years since the incorporation of Saanich it has been something of an anomaly that Victoria has had a 365-acre park in another municipality; it is especially so now when the other municipality has grown to be the bigger in population.

Unlike the Beaver-Elk Lakes property in which Victoria had a substantial investment, and for which the capital region board is paying $250,000, Mount Douglas Park could be transferred to Saanich without any distinct loss to Victoria citizens, and this, too, favors a takeover.

One question that arises, however, is whether it might be better—again in principle—to add Mount Douglas Park to the chain of parks and parklands being acquired by the capital region, rather than make it a Saanich park. Like the Elk-Beaver Lakes park it is used by people from all over the region. It is not a local park of the playground type nor should it ever be developed in such a way as to rob it of its "natural heritage" character. And the cost of its maintenance (even if Saanich were unwilling to absorb the city's share and foot the whole bill without ownership, as it has done at Elk and Beaver Lakes) is small enough not to impede seriously the regional board's program of buying up park land while it is still available.

The same, incidentally, cannot be said of the cost of maintaining Thetis Lake Park, of which the mayor would like to see the region assume control.

"Think the drum would be too ostentatious, Paul?"

No Ready Remedy

Quebec Danger Remains

By CYRILLE FELTEAU
in Montreal La Presse
(A Translation)

WE believe that Mr. Robert Winters, candidate for the Liberal leadership, is too optimistic when he says that "the separatist movement is on the decline in Quebec."

In our opinion, he deludes himself also when he says that this force of division "has no roots in the population and does not constitute a serious menace." Let us stress immediately we hope that the judgment of the federal minister of trade will turn out to be right. However, we fear that in two, three or five years the facts will prove him wrong.

Unfortunately, separatism is doing more than survive among us because it feeds daily on grievances which would be fairly simple to alleviate or to eradicate if only people wanted to take the trouble. But first of all people must see, understand and desire—three intellectual exercises in which too many people are still refusing to participate.

Mr. Winters said at Quebec that the question of national unity is of prime importance and that in his opinion the problem stems from two sources: economic disparity and linguistic inequality. In his view these two factors are inseparable. The French-Canadian minorities in the country, even if they become satisfied from a linguistic point of view, will continue to complain about a government which fails to obtain for them the same comfort, the same welfare, the same economic opportunities as those enjoyed by the majority of the population.

At first glance, the views of the minister-candidate appear to depict fairly well the views of French-Canadians outside Quebec.

But can the same be applied to Quebec? We still hesitate to believe it. We believe that the difference lies in the means we will use to obtain this double equality. There is no doubt that we want to obtain it largely through our own efforts, that with the help of increased political powers, which will allow us to lift ourselves up to the rank of equal partners, without destroying Canada in the process.

The next prime minister of the country must understand these requirements if he wishes to unite in the building of a new Canada, and not in supplying new weapons to an ever-present and always dangerous separatist movement.

British Streamlining Process

Commonwealth, Foreign Offices Amalgamated for Efficiency

By KENNETH HOLROYD
from London

BRITAIN'S new foreign secretary, Mr. Michael Stewart, has taken up office with an important new job ahead of him—the task of supervising the amalgamation of the Foreign Office and the Commonwealth Office into a single department. But the amalgamation is not basically a new development. Moves in this direction were initiated by Lord Plowden's committee which reported on Britain's representational services overseas as far back as December, 1963.

"The logic of events," said the Plowden report, "points towards the amalgamation of the Commonwealth Relations Office and the Foreign Office, the unified control and execution of our external policy as a whole which would result would be a rational and helpful development."

Among the objections which the committee found to Britain's divided method of handling her external affairs was the fact that it cut across every other kind of international grouping and association.

It is difficult, for example, to divide responsibility in some areas of the world, such as the Middle East and Africa, where regional groupings cut across Commonwealth lines, where Foreign Office and Commonwealth Office interests overlap and where the problems faced frequently have the additional complication of being in one way or another the concern of the United Nations.

Cyprus is a case in point. While the country is basically a Commonwealth concern, the United Nations is, of course, involved there—and in Whitehall the United Nations departments are in the Foreign Office. Cyprus also tends to present problems with NATO and CENTO implications and, again, these are problems handled in the Foreign Office.

"With two ministries, two overseas services and two communications systems, the process of trying to hammer out a sensible worldwide policy is, with the best of goodwill, a wasteful and time-consuming process," said Lord Plowden. "At times of crisis these shortcomings can prove disastrous."

And the committee pointed out that Britain is in fact the only Commonwealth country whose external affairs are directed by more than one ministry.

Nevertheless, members of the Plowden Committee hesitated to recommend the establishment of a single ministry in 1963.

Today in History

By The Canadian Press

U.S. President Harry S. Truman formally authorized the Marshall plan 20 years ago today—in 1948—setting aside $17,000,000,000 over four years for the reconstruction of 17 countries of Western Europe. The plan had a partly political purpose, because it was hoped that economic stability would preserve Greece, France, Italy and several other countries from drifting into the Communist bloc.

1949—An armistice in the Arab-Israeli war was achieved. 1965—The Canadian Parliament's longest session prorogued on the 248th day.

First World War: Fifty years ago today—in 1918—the German navy covered the landing of a German expeditionary force of 40,000 men at Hangö, southern Finland. Gen. Sir Henry Rawlinson was appointed to command the British 4th Army.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today—in 1943—RAF and RCAF bombers raided the city of Essen, rendering almost all of the giant Krupp armament works completely idle—but 21 planes, including five Canadian, failed to return. U.S. bombers sank two Japanese cruisers and a destroyer at Kaviang, New Ireland.

It came too at a particularly relevant moment, for Mr.

George Thomson, Secretary of State for Commonwealth Affairs, is a former Foreign Office minister of state and so represents something of a catalyst for the close unity and understanding needed between the two offices.

Mr. Thomson will continue to be a member of the cabinet for the present, but it is clear that whatever happens after the amalgamation is complete, no less weight will be given to Commonwealth considerations during the process of policy-making and decision-taking.

Mr. Stewart's task will undoubtedly take some little time, although it should be eased considerably by the preparatory work already carried out. Since the report of the Plowden Committee was adopted, there has naturally been contingency planning for what was obviously a likely development in the future.

For the other members of the Commonwealth, there will be no change in the present convention under which their representatives in London have direct access to British ministers.

In the long run the success of the amalgamation will depend on the work of the men and women in the new department. The way in which they have made a success of the integration already carried out augurs well for the success of Mr. Stewart's present task.

Terrorism in Latin America Delegated to Young People

By WILLIAM GIANDONI

As in Chile, the terrorists often employ women, students and children to do their dirty work. The tactic was popularized during Castro's Cuban revolution. The theory seems to be that women and children arouse fewer suspicions before the act and afterwards are treated with greater leniency than adult male terrorists.

Strikingly pretty girls have lost their lives working with guerrillas in Guatemala, Bolivia and Venezuela in recent months. In Guatemala much of the terrorism is said to be the work of misguided teenagers laboring under the direction of adults.

Police in Guatemala City recently let newsmen listen to the stories of two boys accused of helping set fire to department stores in that Central American capital.

Both Carlos Bourdet, 19, and Jose Antonio Estrada Bojano, 20, are sons of middle-class families of above average income. Their parents are not believed to be politically active and were not aware of the boys' revolutionary activities until after the youths were arrested.

Bourdet denied ever having taken part in terrorist action but admitted once starting out with an armed group. "We got in the car, but as it had no tires, one went flat, and we could not go on..."

Both Guatemalan students indicated that they had lost their taste for revolutionary activity weeks and months before they were arrested at the end of February. But the bombings go on.

Most of the violence in Chile these days is inspired by the Socialists who have been maintaining much closer contacts with the Cuban dictatorship of Premier Fidel Castro than the Communists, who take their lead from Moscow.

Much the same is true in other countries troubled by terrorism. The Communists generally claim to believe that "peaceful coexistence" will defeat the United States at a lower cost in everything but time.

Nevertheless, instances of terrorist activity seem to be increasing.

Immature Louts

British Scholars In Disrepute

By IVOR BROWN from London

WITH the coming of the Easter vacation there will be a peaceful silence at some recently tumultuous British places of education. It must be admitted that a noisy and sometimes violent minority had done serious damage to the valuation of a university career. The British taxpayers, by whom a vastly increased number of young men and women are entirely supported in their years of study, are angrily wondering whether the nation is getting value for the money thus laid out.

The head of a Cambridge college has stressed that an academic life is provided to promote the use of reason as well as scholastic or scientific instruction. There is nothing reasonable in refusal to hear a cabinet minister or other prominent person, who comes to the university as an invited speaker.

In some cases there has been physical menace as well as gross discourtesy. Students are vociferously demanding more freedom in the regulation of university life. Yet they deny to others the most essential and elementary liberty, the freedom of speech.

It must be remembered that the shouters-down—with their morose screaming of "Out, Out!" when a distinguished visitor arrives—are a fanatic fringe. Most have more sense. The authorities at Oxford, for example, have just reported favorably on last term's behavior. That there should have to be any such report would have been unthinkable not long ago. Yet the harm has been done and the public image of the undergraduate is becoming that of an immature lout not a serious and adult scholar.

The consort of Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip, who recently faced a television quiz, stressed one absurdity of Britain today, namely that in an age called "permissive" the average citizen is so much restricted by new laws that he almost needs a licence to breathe. This needs qualification. The students of both sexes have much more liberty than their predecessors. The women especially have liberty of movement and conduct undreamed of by their grandmothers.

It is a long time since I was at Oxford but then the regulations and obligations were far stricter than now. I had to attend early morning roll-calls at 8 a.m.

I had to attend Chapel on Sundays. That was silly because nothing creates ire more than religion enforced. But the rule was there. If some of today's lawless students had to parade in their gowns before breakfast and were compelled to worship willy-nilly they would probably desecrate the Chapel or burn it down.

It may seem strange today that we were not grumbling. Yet we were aware of and grateful for our privileged condition, paid for by scholarships left by pious founders of colleges or supplied by our parents.

There was a certain amount of liquorish high spirits and rowdiness on Saturday nights, but the college authorities could handle that. We had our political parties and contentions but we had not thought of holding up the business of the town or embarrassing the police by making protest marches with banners and uproar.

It can fairly be said that the students of today are more politically alert and are to be admired for their anxious concern with public affairs and with the administration of their own teaching and regimen. They grow up more rapidly than past generations and are rapidly aware of the problems and opportunities of adult life. They also have the handicap of maturing in a world of far-flung war, turbid finance and international chaos. The future is cloudy and discouraging. That is a genuine grievance. They also see their allowances buy less and less as prices soar. There is cause for a sense of frustration and a muddled kind of anger. But it is the special business of the highly educated to think in a cool way and not go about bawling and brawling in a frenzy.

Life today is full of confusion and contradictions. Permissiveness is continually extended in sexual relations, in the allowance of what may be said and printed, and in the conduct of arts and entertainments. Here the students hear all, read all, think they know all and are free to say and do all. There are some for whom freedom is a four-letter word. But outside that sphere there is an ever-diminishing choice.

The nation is being forced by law to face rising costs with restricted and dwindling incomes. The owning or sharing of a cheap car to go to and from work is treated by the government as a luxury. The most flourishing profession of our time is that of the civil servant who, at the instigation of Parliament, is making the restriction industry the busiest in the land.

Into this depressingly unpermissive world the student will go. Meanwhile he is having a fling and sometimes flinging mud. During the Rag Weeks in which he is ostensibly collecting for charity he is frequently creating a public nuisance and plaguing an overworked police force by carrying the practical joke to pestilential limits. That again urges his seniors to ask why they should subsidize on a wide front a form of education which tolerates such anti-social stupidity.

Once more it must be emphasized that the follies are those of the few. But the minority of troublemakers, stimulated by political pressure on the Left and shouting a slogan of "student power," work hard to capture the student unions and often succeed. That seems to be happening in universities all over the world. It is a disastrous preparation for life since the student who leaves to earn his living will find him or her, especially in Britain, asking permission of politicians and bureaucrats for any move in his professional or industrial life or advance in his income and career.

He may, as Prince Philip said, need a licence to breathe. So if he now enjoys bursting his lungs with a clamor of protest he should realize that the university disciplines which he challenges are nothing to the treadmill of his career to come in the way of life planned and enforced by his rulers. The Easter vacation gives him some peace and quiet in which to think about this.

Kosygin Visit Points to Long-Lasting Good Relationship

Moscow 'Buys' Iran's Friendship

By DEV MURARKA

A steady recent improvement in relations between the Soviet Union and Iran lies behind Soviet Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin's visit to Iran. Stalin was the only other Soviet head of government to go to Iran, and he went to Teheran during the war only to talk to Churchill and Roosevelt.

"The Shah, who is lavishing hospitality on Kosygin on this occasion, said in 1954 that the 'neutrality of Iran is futile and dangerous.' He was then on the eve of signing the ill-fated Baghdad military pact, designed as a shield against communism in general and the Soviet Union in particular. The two neighbors have always been on a see-saw of hostility and resigned tolerance. What is strikingly new is the sign that this time good relations are headed for a more or less lasting duration and are based on a growing involvement of the Iranian economy with Soviet financial and technical aid.

A distinct change came in September, 1962, when the Iranian government pledged itself, "Not to allow any foreign power to establish rocket-launching sites of any kind on Iranian territory," and went on to assure Moscow that Iran would never be a party to any aggression against the Soviet Union.

In the wake of the shooting down of the American U-2 spy plane by the Russians and reports of American rocket bases being established in states bordering on the Soviet Union, Moscow found the Iranian action gratifying.

The following year the Russians signed their first post-war aid agreement with Iran for about $20,000,000 to build a dam on the frontier River Araxes for land to be irrigated on both sides of the border.

Then in 1965, the Russians came up with the spectacular agreement to purchase, on a progressive scale, up to 10,000 million cubic meters of natural gas annually from Iran.

It will be supplied through a 42-inch diameter pipeline covering a distance of 600 miles, one-third of which is to be built by the Soviet Union, although Iran will supply materials for it.

The Russians also gave credits to Iran worth $280,000,000 for building a steel mill with the ultimate capacity of 1,200,000 tons of steel annually. The Soviet constructed an agricultural machinery plant and an engineering plant with an annual capacity of 30,000 tons of metal goods.

The Russians are now helping the nationalized Iranian oil corporation with the exploration and geological surveys.

Russian permission to allow Iran to transport goods to Western Europe as well as the Far East through transshipment via the Caspian Sea and the Baltic has cut transportation time by 50 per cent and lowered the cargo rates of Iranian exports and imports. Given these developments, which will have major impact on the Iranian economy, it is difficult to see how the Iranians can afford to have bad relations with the Soviet Union in the future. But the significance of the Teheran-Moscow entente is even greater than that. The Russians view it as a major success towards a considerable reduction, if not eventual elimination, of American military and political influence in the so-called "northern tier" states of Pakistan, Iran and Turkey. With Afghanistan and Iraq they already have friendly relations.

That some of these countries are still members of the American-orientated Central Treaty Organization does not worry them a great deal because it is evident that this organization is dying on its feet.

This is why the Russians have advanced a separate credit of $110,000,000 to Iran to purchase Soviet arms, mainly armored troop carriers, trucks and anti-aircraft guns. The Russians consider that Iran is no longer fully in the Western orbit and very close to a neutral posture.

Soviet approaches towards Iran are matched by similar steps towards Turkey and Pakistan, and if a long-term view is taken Moscow stands to gain enormous political credit.

Another complex but important Soviet motive in befriending Teheran is the need to diversify its political base in the Middle East. The chronic instability of Arab politics compels them to have some more stable alternatives. Iran is an ideal choice.

KOSYGIN

Moreover, Iran is developing hostility towards the Saudi Arabia, which suits the Russians, since they consider the Saudi Arabian monarch to be a stalking horse for American policies and influence in the region.

Rivalry between Teheran and Riyadh is over the oil-bearing Persian Gulf area to which both countries lay claims. The Russians are opposed to a Saudi Arabian hegemony there and are therefore backing Iran in her opposition to King Faisal, though stopping short of supporting the Iranian claim.

Kosygin's trip to Teheran therefore is an important link in the chain of events, the aim of which is Russian establishment of greater political influence in Asia at the expense of the Western powers.

Statement Veiled Warning to U.S.?

Thieu Remark Premature

By WILLIAM TUOHY, from Saigon

President Nguyen van Thieu's statement Tuesday that American troops could possibly begin a gradual withdrawal by the end of 1968 is being taken with a good deal of salt here. As one U.S. diplomat put it, "The U.S. mission is not predicting the withdrawal of any American troops by the end of 1968."

Informed forces here said President Thieu's statement was not the result of discussion between Vietnamese and American officials but was an off-the-cuff answer to a question at a news conference.

If anything, the statement could be analyzed as veiled warning to the United States not to abandon the South Vietnamese by withdrawing any troops in the months to come.

Vietnamese sources here said Thieu's remarks in Vietnamese contained an undertone of harshness that did not come through the rather bland official translation.

Few observers here believe that Thieu's announced Vietnamese troop buildup of 135,000 men will be such that U.S. troops can be relieved of any responsibility by year's end.

But Thieu and his government have been disturbed by events of the last few days. They worried that President Johnson's decision to step down presages a change in U.S. Vietnam policy toward disengagement.

And they are disappointed that Johnson announced an increase of only 13,500 more combat support troops.

Consequently, it is said, Thieu has decided to warn the Vietnamese people that they might have to face the future with less than total U.S. support.

The fact that the mild-mannered president equated any U.S. withdrawal with "desertion" was read here as a reflection of the serious fears building up within the Saigon government.

And despite what Thieu said about being "consulted" on the bombing limitation of North Vietnam, the general view here is that he was only "informed" of the U.S. intention, and that he is miffed about what he considers cavalier treatment in this regard.

If and when American troops are withdrawn, according to U.S. sources, it will be along the lines outlined in the Manila conference declaration of October, 1966—that American forces would begin to be moved out when the North Vietnamese ceased infiltration and the "level of violence thus subsides."

But the Vietnamese are worried that a change of American policy might call for withdrawal of U.S. troops before the conditions outlined at Manila actually come about in South Vietnam.

In this case, Thieu and his generals plan "to go it alone," Vietnamese sources say, with whatever help they can then obtain from the other nations that have sent troops to South Vietnam: South Korea, Thailand, Australia, The Philippines and New Zealand.

Despite President Thieu's protestations, few military men here believe the armed forces of South Vietnam could cope with the combined might of the Viet Cong and infiltrated North Vietnamese troops.

"If we were in a position of strength," said one U.S. official, "obviously we would welcome moving U.S. troops out. But we are not—not yet."

In the view of most analysts here, only a dramatic allied battlefield success followed by agreement of Hanoi to reduce its infiltration could justify the withdrawal of any U.S. troops this year.

Unless, of course, the U.S. government decides to embark on dramatic new departures in military policy in Vietnam.

Bahamas Premier Odds-On Election Favorite

Negro Power Certain

By BEN FUNK, from NASSAU

The Negro government of Premier Lynden P. Findling is almost certain to emerge with unchallenged power from the bitterest and most costly political campaign in the history of the Bahamas Islands.

After 15 months of shaky rule by a one-vote margin in the House of Assembly—a margin that recently vanished with the death of a member—Findling challenged his opposition to a showdown fight for control of the far-flung islands of the British colony.

But many political observers say it was no real gamble when the shrewd, London-trained lawyer dissolved the House and ordered elections. When the votes are counted April 10, he is an odds-on favorite to capture a solid majority of the 38 House seats.

"He's a shoo-in for 25 to 26 House votes," said one real estate developer with millions of pounds invested in the Bahamas and a close ear to the political ground.

The premier wants full internal control, including the police powers of the Crown-appointed governor, Sir Ralph Grey, but he insisted that full independence will be sought only if the people demand it.

His opponents argue, however, that once Findling is firmly entrenched, he will rush headlong toward a Black Power regime. And when this is accomplished, they say the mandate for total independence will not be long coming.

With it, they add, will come new taxes to one of the last tax havens of the Western world, and a letdown in foreign investments.

In his first major broadcast address of the campaign, Findling said: "I give you my pledge that the Progressive Liberal party will not seek independence and will not introduce the income tax."

In the brief tenure of the first Negro administration in Bahamian history, Findling has spiked all other possible issues.

"Our political enemies prophesied doom," he says,

"They said the tourists would stay away, the investors would pack up and leave, unemployment would be rife, and we would have to eat grass."

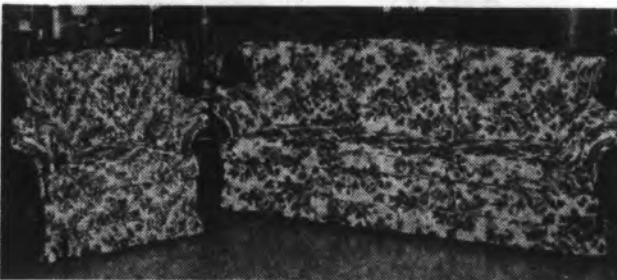

The opposite has happened. Tourism, life blood of the island; foreign investments and building permits all rose sharply in 1967.

Said Findling: "This government is not about to kill the goose that has laid a golden egg. This government will not render investments unsafe. This government will not upset the basic framework of the Bahamian economy."

Although he has moved cautiously in other fields so far, Findling lost no time in pushing Negro Bahamians into high positions. To help his people qualify, he doubled expenditures for education.

Carefully discouraging Black Power talk, Findling says he has only "a simple dream—in 10 years a stable, prosperous community and a decent standard of living for all."

Decision in '68 On Republic

LISBON (UPI) — Rhodesian opportunities as for white Premier Ian Smith Tuesday was quoted as saying a decision will be taken later this year on whether to declare Rhodesia a republic, savoring its remaining ties with Britain.

Smith, quoted in the Spanish newspaper Diario-Popular, said the issue would be decided when his rebel government presents a new constitution later this year. He did not pinpoint the exact date.

On his white minority government's racial policies Smith was quoted as saying: "We believe there are for black Rhodesians the same

Stalin-Era Judge Found Hanged

PRAGUE (AP) — The body of Czechoslovakia's top investigator of Stalin-era crimes was found hanged from an oak tree Tuesday, five days after he vanished on the heels of a report charging he served as judge in a Stalin-era court in 1955.

Police said they are "99-percent certain" that the death of Dr. Jozef Brestansky, 42, deputy president of the Supreme Court, was a suicide, but a fellow judge indicated he is doubtful considering Brestansky's "strong character."

In Prague, the tide of political change was still running high. A key supporter of liberalization demanded the resignation of the entire government so that "no single member of the new government could be held in doubt" by the people.

Police investigating the Brestansky case reported a black briefcase he carried with him at the time of his disappearance Thursday had been found and said it contained a notebook, a Czech-Russian dictionary and an identity card.

Prague newspapers speculated before Brestansky's body was found that he had been eliminated, perhaps by agents of another country, because he knew too much about the workings of the Communist police system and Stalinist purges of the 1950s.

But a newspaper in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia's second largest city, claimed before he presided at a 1955 trial in which officials of a chemical plant were sentenced for high treason and sabotage—the kind of trumped-up crimes the country's reformist Communist leadership assigned him to investigate.

The newspaper, charging that he suddenly became a judge without a high school education in 1954, said it could furnish "a further list of deeds from the

Warsaw Shakes Forces

WARSAW (UPI) — Poland's defence ministry Tuesday night announced the biggest armed forces shakeup since last June's Middle East war. Three high-placed generals were shifted to desk jobs in a move apparently related to Poland's current political upheaval.

The three generals were moved from troop to administrative commands. Political observers indicated the shifts reflected the Communist regime's concern over intensifying political unrest.

VAGUE POST

In what appeared a demotion in responsibility, general of division Czeslaw Waryszak was shifted from command of the huge Warsaw military region to the vague post of inspector of bases and equipment for the ministry.

The Warsaw region covers all of eastern Poland.

Brig-Gen. Jozef Stabelski was switched from chief of staff of the Pomeranian military district in northwest Poland to the post of deputy inspector for training.

RISEING OFFICER

Brig-Gen. Edwin Rozlubirski, rated one of Poland's fastest rising young generals, was pulled from command of the Sixth Airborne Division in southwest Poland and named deputy chief of training in charge of assault troops.

No reason was given for the changes.

Replacing Waryszak was general of division Zygmunt Huszcza, former deputy chief inspector of training.

The shifts were the biggest since last June when at least four generals and two colonels were shifted or retired after they allegedly failed to toe the party line on the Middle East war.

Deals

or the other could polare the stop-Trudeau forces.

The standard-bearer, presumably, would be the man in second place on the first ballot.

But who will be second? Paul Martin, according to earlier reports, was first or second. His supporters still insist he is first.

But Paul Hellyer now claims he is in second position, after Trudeau, and is reported to be phoning delegates across the country with this claim.

To show the delegates that he is still No. 2, or better, Martin would be helped by an alliance before the first ballot, giving him a much stronger bloc.

NO ALLIANCE

But Winters, Tuesday, was rejecting all talk of an alliance with anyone.

He saw himself with more than 400 votes on the first ballot, more on the second, and in a very strong position to win.

A major alliance to stop Trudeau might need Winters, Mitchell Sharp and John Turner.

But at this stage of a horse race, none of these three men is willing to make deals.

APPROACHES

A Sharp spokesman admitted Tuesday night that approaches had been made, but refused to say who made them.

Another complication? Mr. Sharp, personally, is reported to favor Trudeau — after himself, of course.

A Martin spokesman said a lot of talking is going on, in many of the camps, at all levels.

Asked if Martin could support Hellyer, or vice-versa, he said they could. Each had a high regard for the other.

DEADLOCK HOPE

Turner is saying "no deals" and is hoping that a deadlock at the top will still deliver him the leadership.

That is the position, too, of Robert Winters, who discounts gloomy polls.

Fuel Report Put on Shelf

Mr. Sheldford, "which in effect said, 'Do nothing, wait and see.' I'd like to see the government put this into policy, but I'm not too surprised that it wasn't done right away."

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, who sat on the committee, said: "If this government has anything to do with it, the committee's recommendations are dead."

Another committee member Allan Williams (L. West Vancouver-Howe Sound), said his party believed the government wouldn't take the requested action. He added: "After a royal commission, and two legislative committee studies, this is the tragedy."

NEED INDICATED

The committee report said after holding 10 meetings it received sufficient information from major oil companies and others in the field to indicate a need for legislation.

It said the proposed new laws should be designed to:

- Ensure no return to the market practice commonly referred to as consignment selling or to other similar arrangements;
- Preserve two distinct markets for gasoline and allied petroleum products which now exist — a non-brand product market and a brand-name product market.

- Ensure that market conditions exist in both to guarantee a supply on a basis of equality to all dealers.
- Ensure that the prices paid for non-brand gasoline by the retailer shall be at least three cents less than brand-name gasoline.

The report added: "The type of advertising known as gifts, gimmicks and give-aways, involving a type of coupon and closely relating to trading stamps, should be prohibited."

It was in March, 1968, that the Morrow Royal Commission report was first made public, following nearly 2½ years of study of gasoline prices in B.C.

The commissioner, Judge Charles W. Morrow, recommended that the provincial government move to regulate the petroleum industry if the oil companies didn't voluntarily lower gas prices and abandon marketing policies that gave them control over retail markets.

Last year a special committee of the legislature, also headed by Mr. Capozzi, recommended no legislation on any of the Morrow recommendations.

It added, however, that another committee be struck in 1969 to see whether recommendations to end consignment selling and purchase agreements of more than five years' duration had been followed.

The government decided to order a further committee study at this session, after only one year had elapsed.

Help Offered Drug Makers

OTTAWA (CP) — A program of federal loans for drug manufacturers who cannot get money elsewhere was announced by the industry department.

The department said in a news release the new program is "designed to bring about more economic drug production in Canada and assist in reducing drug prices."

Democratic nomination, got about five per cent of the Democratic vote on write-ins. In Philadelphia he congratulated McCarthy for "an outstanding job of presenting the issues."

STOPPED SHORT

Although both McCarthy and Kennedy have been highly critical of the president's Asian policies, they stopped short of advocating any abrupt American withdrawal from Vietnam.

A referendum on the ballot in Madison, where war criticism has been hottest, called for an immediate ceasefire and an American withdrawal. It apparently was defeated.

Nixon seemed likely to chalk up 80 per cent of the Republican total and more than 30 per cent of the aggregate vote cast in the primary. This latter would exceed his showing when he ran in the 1960 primary here without opposition.

WRITE-INS

With 34 per cent of 3,291 precincts counted in the Democratic primary, McCarthy had 179,884, or 53 per cent of the votes counted, while Johnson had 133,881 votes, or 40 per cent.

In the write-in voting, in which names of preferred candidates can be written on the ballot, Kennedy had 15,877, or five per cent; former governor George Wallace of Alabama, 1,456, no per cent, and Humphrey, 133, no per cent.

In the Republican balloting, with 34 per cent counted, Nixon had 164,885 votes, or 80 per cent; Reagan 22,581, or 11 per cent; Stassen, 11,335, five per cent.

What's a company like Cominco doing in a place like Düsseldorf?

Opening up new markets in Western Europe for the sale of Cominco metals — metals mined and processed in British Columbia. That's what Cominco is doing in Düsseldorf, West Germany. Just as it is doing elsewhere — in the United States, Britain, Africa, Japan, India and South-East-Asia. The reason for this is simple. Today Cominco's metal output in British Columbia is at near record levels. We make far more than British Columbia or even all of Canada can use. So Cominco must go world-wide to market its B.C. products. Developing foreign markets for Cominco products means more trade and revenue for British Columbia today; even more in the future. Cominco Ltd. The eye-on-the-future Company.

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

When the first warm days of spring start to take the chill off the lake waters, that is the time to go bobber fishing for trout.

Antenna-Float inventor Barney Steel got 10 trout, all but one cutthroats and ranging from 1/2-pound to 1 1/2-pounds, on Douglas Lake Saturday and his partner, Don Allen, got five, but not many others were catching fish.

Their secret was the greater depth they could attain by casting with the Antenna Float. They fished about 20 feet from the edge of the lake and at a depth of 11 feet, using the small Trout Master float, which Steel has just added to his several other sizes.

Steel finds it difficult to keep up with the demand for his float, which also signals when the fish are around. At the moment, they can only be obtained from Ed's Rod, Gun and Cycle Shop in Esquimalt.

Fishing Weeks Lake Sunday, Tuttle managed to get one trout on the Antenna Float, but he reports the lake was cold and fishing was slow. Incidentally, he found the gate at the Port Renfrew road closed and had to walk three miles to reach Weeks Lake. If the gate had been opened he could have driven to within three-quarters of a mile of the lake, where fallen logs across the road would have blocked his way.

We have fished with Steel's Antenna Float, and they actually do signal when fish are circling the worm or other bait. He says his invention is the most sensitive ever devised.

Before the fish hits it will usually circle the bait. The movement caused by the displacement of water is recorded by a wobble on the centre shaft of the float, and this warns the angler of a possible bite.

He is then able to take in any slack line and prepare to strike.

An even bigger advantage of his Antenna Float is that it can be cast from a spinning reel so it will fish at any predetermined depth from two or three feet from the rod to hook to 40 or 50 feet.

With normal floats or bobbers, it is only possible to fish the depth that one can easily cast with line dropping from bobber at rod tip to hook, no more than five or six feet. Ordinarily bobbers have to be adjusted manually.

The Antenna Float has a boom with an eye at the end out from the top of the shaft of the float and another eye attached to the bottom of the shaft.

The line is threaded through the eyes with a big red bead above the uppermost eye. Then a bit of red nylon (it must be nylon) yarn is tied on to the line at the depth it is wished to fish.

The nylon winds easily on and off the spool of the reel bobber at rod tip to hook, no more than five or six feet, and doesn't impede the cast. When the cast is made the float just slides up the line through the boom eyes of the float until the red bead stops on the nylon yarn at the predetermined fishing depth.

Bobber fishing is family fishing and fun fishing. You can take along the family, put the rod on a forked stick and enjoy a picnic while you wait for a fish to strike.

We went bobber fishing on Lower Campbell Lake, at Miller Creek, a couple of weeks ago with John and Beverley Ebert. To reach Miller Creek, drive along Butte Lake Road past Forbes Landing to the logging road at Camp 8. Turn on the logging road for about 150 feet and just before the gate that bars the way any further, turn sharp right on an overgrown trail for about 1 1/2 miles to a broken bridge. Walk over the bridge, take the little trail on the left to a fairly long point of lakeshore, ideal for bobber fishing from the bank.

"The Antenna Float is a good bobber," said Ebert, who didn't happen to be able to get one. "I like a slender bobber (the Antenna is slender) and I like quite a bit of weight so the bobber doesn't rise too high in the water and is easily triggered by a fish."

One trick he uses is to grease the line going to the bobber, so the monofilament will float.

"Then you can wind-in tight without warning the fish and you can strike without the fish knowing it until it is hooked," he explains.

"If you know the fish are around, cast out 10 or 15 feet farther than you think the fish are and then pick up the line like crazy and let the bobber make a wake. It will attract the trout," he says.

"Then let the bobber sit still. The fish will hit and when you see the bobber move, tighten up and strike. A fish will move a slender bobber sideways. Never strike a bobber that is motionless."

"If the bobber doesn't move, the fish hasn't got the hook in its mouth."

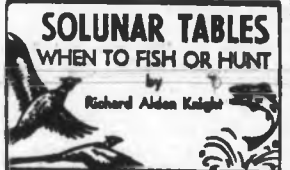

Ebert likes to fish evenings or late afternoons. He uses four-pound-test leader from bobber to lure. He likes a No. 6 or No. 8 single hook for worms and a small treble hook for paste.

"It is quite important to fish tight to shore late at night," he says.

Negro Boycott Wrong Former Champ States

DETROIT (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, looking weary but healthy after a bout with the surgeons, told reporters Tuesday Negro athletes will make a serious mistake if they decide not to represent the U.S. at the Olympic Games.

"THEY'RE GAINING" — "Maybe they don't have equal opportunity in America, but they're gaining it every day," the Brown Bomber said, sitting in a wheelchair.

"And that's something you should realize. Things are improving. If they were going backwards, it would be different."

Louis, who had his gall bladder and his appendix removed last Tuesday, also said Cassius Clay erred by not entering the Army, but that he still considers Clay the world's heavyweight champ.

Louis spent four years in the Army during World War II at the height of his career.

Wearing a colorful robe, Louis was wheeled into the director's office at the new $3 million Kivwila Hospital in Detroit. He was flanked by his nurses, his wife, Martha, who is an attorney in Beverly Hills, Calif., and his doctors.

OLD FRIEND — They included Dr. Robert Bennett, who has been Louis' doctor since the time when Louis was in his boxing heyday in the late 1930s and 1940s.

The doctor, one of four on the operating team, said Louis' condition was satisfactory and that he may be released from the hospital within 10 days. He and his wife will spend a few more days in Detroit visiting his brothers and sisters before returning to California.

Louis said his wife "has been giving me road work" around the hospital corridors. "She walks me around at 3 in the morning, at 6 in the morning and at 8 at night."

Louis said he felt the idea of running tournaments to find a successor to Clay, who was dethroned when a jury found him guilty of a draft dodging charge, "is ridiculous."

"As far as I'm concerned Clay is still champion, at least until he goes to jail or retires. I think he made an awful mistake by not going into the Army. He threw away a brilliant career."

And as in many times in the past, Louis ducked the question on whether he could have beaten Clay, if they had met at the height of their careers.

"It would have been a good match. I don't know who would have won. I think Clay is good enough to fight anybody," Louis said.

South Africa Given IOC Accreditation

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — The head of South Africa's Olympic group said Tuesday he has received the International Olympic Committee's accreditation for South Africa to compete at the 1968 Games.

"The Mexican invitation is now merely a matter of form," added Frank Braun, chairman of the South African Olympic Games Association.

Meeting Tonight — Amalgamated Conservation Society will hold its annual general meeting at the Ingraham Hotel tonight starting at 8.

More than 40 nations have said they will boycott the Games at Mexico City, Oct. 12-27, if South Africa competes.

South Africa was barred from the 1964 Games because of its racial policies but was reinstated by the IOC recently.

Meanwhile in Rome, Italy's Olympic Committee declared in a letter published Tuesday that the South African Olympic organization should be ruled "legally inexcusable."

STRONG FEELINGS — The letter, from Giulio Onesti, president of the Italian committee, to Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, described as "legally absurd" the IOC resolution authorizing South Africa's readmission.

Onesti noted that the Olympic charter bars racial discrimination and obliges national Olympic committees to enforce the ban against discrimination in their countries.

He said the South African Olympic Committee could not "this and therefore forfeits its right to recognition by the IOC."

Onesti's letter was written in view of the meeting of the IOC's executive committee at Lausanne, Switzerland, April 20-21, to discuss the thorny South African problem.

Many Pay Last Respects To Long-Time Sportsman

Funeral services were held Tuesday for long-time Victoria sports official Jim Lackie, who died Saturday night at 75 in Royal Jubilee Hospital after a two-month illness.

A prominent figure on local football, soccer, basketball and hockey circles during a 42-year career, the Scottish-born Lackie came to Winnipeg in 1910 and moved to Victoria in 1926.

Active in city softball for 15 years as a manager, Lackie led Esquimalt Meat Market to the Western Canadian senior men's title in 1946 and his senior A Douglas Tire team won the B.C. championship.

Lackie was a life member of the B.C. Softball Association and a director of Victoria United of the Pacific Coast Soccer League during the 1950s.

He retired as manager of Canadian Stevedoring Company's Vancouver Island division in 1963. In 1936, he organized a longshoreman's team which captured the city, Island and B.C. tug-of-war championships.

Lackie helped to organize a commercial hockey league after World War II and until his illness was an active member of the Victoria Curling Club. He also enjoyed fishing.

He is survived by his wife, Amelia, and a daughter, Edna (Mrs. Clifford Robbins), four granddaughters and two great-granddaughters.

Many former associates attended the funeral service at McCall's chapel conducted by Rev. R. J. Morris. The service was followed by cremation.

School Financing On Revision Road

The revised formula for school financing passed second reading Tuesday night after four and a half hours of debate.

The vote was 28-20. Defending the new legislation, Education Minister Leslie Peterson said it would lead to a better distribution of teachers with high qualifications throughout the province.

SPENDING GOING UP He pointed out that the government will be spending more money on education this year than previously. It was stupid to suggest that the legislation was designed to hold costs at the present level or to reduce them.

Mr. Peterson objected to suggestions that school board should have complete autonomy as municipalities have.

TAXPAYERS' MASTERS? "There seems to be a growing tendency on the part of some educational authorities," he said, "to consider that they are the masters of the taxpayers."

"They think they can provide education at any level of costs they see fit, and the taxpayer must foot the bill."

He gave examples of education costs to which he objected, but refused to name the school districts concerned.

Three adjoining school districts had education costs of $488, $559, and $750 per pupil, but the quality of education was lower in the most expensive district.

He said some centralized authority was necessary to ensure equality of education for all districts.

Otherwise richer districts would pay higher salaries and attract better qualified personnel at the expense of poorer districts.

FALLS BACK ON THEM School districts are still free to provide the standard of education that the taxpayers approve by going directly to them. The bill was passed to committee along with three amendments proposed by Mr. Peterson Monday night.

Meanwhile, two of three capital region school board chairmen said Tuesday that amendments to the Public Schools Act should be deferred one year for study by trustees.

'CAN'T UNDERSTAND' The third, Peter Burn of the Greater Victoria school board, said he is resigned to the changes even though school officials here can't understand them.

Opposition leader Robert Strachan and NDP MLA Eileen

Dailly both said in the Legislature Tuesday that Bill 86 should be set over until the 1969 legislative session to allow further study and representations from school trustees and teachers.

The government later defeated an NDP motion to that effect.

BE DESIRABLE John Bartanus, chairman of the Sooke school board, and Nora Lindsay, chairman of the Saanich school board, agreed that a year's delay would be desirable.

"There has been no opportunity for us to study the changes," said Mrs. Lindsay. Mr. Burn said he couldn't see what good a delay would do, because the government would still do what it wanted anyway.

He said he asked the district's secretary-treasurer last week for an explanation of the new financing system and was told it is impossible to calculate on information now made public.

NDP Choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyer William Deverell has been nominated as the New Democratic Party candidate in Vancouver Centre for the next federal election.

NDP Wanted Financing Study

Socreds Defeat School Challenge

The NDP failed in an attempt Tuesday to hold over implementation of the new schools financing formula to allow more time for study.

Both NDP and Liberal speakers supported a motion for a six-month hoist during adjourned second reading of the bill.

Speakers cited letters and telegrams from school trustees, teachers and the general public, objecting to the measures. The motion was defeated 29 to 22.

'RESTRICTION'

Alan Macfarlane (L-Oak Bay) said the proposed new education finance formula would "restrict and hold back" progressive school boards.

School District 61, which he added supports go-ahead programs, could be forced into holding of costly annual referenda if only 100 out of the 57,260 qualified owner-electors petitioned for a vote on additional operating costs.

"This government is shifting its responsibilities to taxpayers on the local level," said Mr. Macfarlane. "This is a move designed to save money and bail the province out of its present financial predicament."

THREE YEARS

Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey) said within three years of implementation of the new school formula, strike action by teachers of the kind recently demonstrated in the U.S. would break out in this province.

"I hope I'm wrong," said Mr. Hall, "but that's what I see in the next three or four years, if this bill goes through."

Dr. Patrick McGeer (L-Point Grey) pointed out that government amendments to the bill were already being proposed.

'PIG IN POKE'

But he claimed: "We're having to vote on a pig in the poke. We don't have the new amendments before us yet."

Randolph Harding (NDP-Revelstoke-Slocan) said: "We are in enough trouble in this province right now, without having some formula brought in which was devised by the minister and his staff without consultation with either school boards or B.C. teachers."

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan predicted education needs would be subjected to the political needs of the province.

Both NDP and Liberal members roundly criticized the amendments which will alter the financial formula under which public school boards of the province operate.

Mr. Strachan said if money was needed for B.C. Hydro, then the budget would reflect that need rather than the needs of education.

He asked the bill be delayed for one year.

B.C. STANDARD

He saw the bill as a measure to level down rather than upgrade the standard of education in the province.

School boards which had previously been in the forefront in providing educational services would find themselves severely curtailed, Mr. Strachan said.

The attack on the bill was led by Mrs. Eileen Dailly (NDP-Burnaby North) who first asked that the bill be delayed.

BILL BASIS

Basis for the bill, she said, was a ministerial discretion, giving the education minister broad powers to expand or curtail education in the province. It had been brought in without consultation with educational bodies.

Mrs. Dailly claimed the new formula could result in school boards hiring teachers with the lowest possible certification, in order to save costs. Or boards might hire teachers with higher certification, but have to curtail programs to pay for better teachers.

Liberal leader Ray Perrault called the schools act amendments "ill-considered" and said his party wasn't going to wrestle with its conscience over whether or not to support the measure, "because it's so obviously bad."

"This bill and the freeze on school construction are marching hand-in-hand down the road to reaction," he said.

Thomas Berger (NDP-Burrard) called for a delay in approval of the proposed legislation on grounds that the formula it contained was "weighted with great consequences" for the future of B.C.

WHO'S NEXT

Robert Williams (NDP-Vancouver East) asked: "Will the municipalities be next? This bill means the government doesn't trust the school boards of the province, neither the trustees nor the people who elected them."

Sluggish Kidneys May Bring Restless Nights

If you "fight the pillow," toss and turn all through the night and don't really know why — perhaps here's news and help for you! One cause of such restlessness may be traced to sluggish kidney action. Urinary irritation and bladder discomfort may follow. The result can be backache and restless nights. This is when Dodd's Kidney Pills can help bring relief. Dodd's stimulates kidney action, helps relieve the irritated condition that causes the backache. Take Dodd's, and see if you don't feel better, rest better. Used successfully by millions for over 70 years. New large size saves money. Adv.

He described the bill as a means for provincial authorities to play politics, handing out "Doggpatch treatment" to some areas and dealing generously with others.

"In Bill 33 we have an act to control wages, and now in this we have an act to control progressive school districts, both proposed by the same minister," said Mr. Williams.

Her cone is for ice cream Our cones are for her safety

B.C. Telephone Company's objective and cones help us meet it.

The B.C. Telephone Company has more than 1,500 vehicles on the road to help bring telephone services to the people of British Columbia.

These vehicles come in a variety of sizes and shapes. And we know from experience that they often attract a lot of interest, especially among curious youngsters like Paggi, the five-year-old ice cream eater pictured above.

We at B.C. Telephone are keenly interested in her safety and that of all youngsters, just as we are keenly interested in the safety of all British Columbians.

That's why we take special care to train our vehicle operators in safe driving and to provide practices designed to prevent accidents.

One of the safety practices we've adopted is called the "cone method of circle check."

It requires that each of our vehicles carry cones of bright red color and that each driver place one cone in front of his vehicle and another behind it when he parks it.

Before he moves his truck, he'll walk to the front and from there to the back of it to pick up the cones. As he circles the vehicle, he'll become aware of objects around it — including any youngsters who may be nearby.

In this way, he prevents accidents in which it is so easy to harm such things as bicycles, tricycles, children's toys — and ice-cream-cone-eating youngsters with incurable curiosity.

B.C. Telephone's more than 7,200 employees strive constantly to provide good telephone service. They also strive to do so in complete safety for all concerned.

Our objective is service with safety and the cone method of circle check for vehicles is just one more way in which we meet it.

Miracle Trees Defy All Christmas Laws

By JOHN MATTERS

If Mrs. Rosalinda Ditmansen's Christmas trees defy all natural laws, could they then have something to do with the supernatural?

For the second year in a row, her Christmas tree has been in a stand without soil or water — and without dropping a single needle for many months.

The temperature of the room has been normal and the two trees have been from different sources. Her last tree, put up a week before Christmas, was thrown out two weeks ago because she had to find space in her living room for a sofa.

"What a pity it had to go," she explained Monday. "It was really lovely those dreary winter evenings. The glittering needles make you gay and joyful."

"I have a wood stove and burn Presto logs and I would sit there, listening to the stove crackling and thinking about that wonderful tree that seemed to want to keep me company."

"It would glitter as if it was covered with little lamps. It was just like light and I thought so many times what a wonderful thing it would be if everyone could enjoy their Christmas trees as long and as much as I did."

But room had to be made for the sofa and the Christmas tree, brought to her home at 582 Toronto Street by a friend who lives on Glenkings Road, had to go.

"I know it would have lasted and lasted, however." If that is a most curious defiance of the principles of plant physiology, listen to what happened last year:

A few days before Christmas, 1966, Mrs. Ditmansen was coming home from shopping when she passed a Boy Scout Christmas tree lot near the Safeway store in James Bay.

"I looked at that tree and I said, please keep it for me. I did not have enough money on me, so I went home for more money and returned and bought it."

"I knew it was the tree for me. It was so beautiful, oh so lovely and I had it in this room until the middle of summer."

It was still in good shape when she threw it out. "So many people came to see it and it delighted all of them."

"I don't know why this is happening. Why do these most extraordinary things take place in my living room?"

"My friends also are asking about my miracle trees."

Hotel 'Skip' Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — Lionel Laframboise, a Liberal leadership candidate who is alleged to have left Vancouver without paying a hotel bill, said Tuesday night it's all a misunderstanding or an attempt to blacken his name.

Laframboise arrived here late Tuesday and immediately took out official nomination papers for the convention opening Thursday. He said he was spending the evening rounding up 50 people to sign his nomination papers for the convention opening Thursday.

He denied he had purposely left Vancouver without paying his bills, but said an agent was supposed to have checked him out of the Georgian Towers Hotel. He left hurriedly, he said, because he could not get aboard the flight to Ottawa he originally wanted, and had to take another flight to Edmonton, and then to Ottawa.

Laframboise said it was laughable that he should not have paid $85.10 for a weekend stay when he had spent $84,000 on his campaign so far.

The Elliot Lake, Ont., mine promoter said someone—whom he identified only as "a woman"—had said he hadn't paid a similar bill at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal, but he had not stayed there.

Laframboise said his stay at the Georgian Towers had been "very pleasant," and that the hotel's publicity director, whom he identified as Alfred Lauritzen, had helped him.

Laframboise was the subject of a warrant for arrest issued Monday by Justice of the Peace W. A. Townley in Vancouver, based on a complaint by Frank Bernard, owner-operator of the Georgian Towers.

It alleged that Laframboise "unlawfully did fraudulently obtain food, lodging and other accommodation at a hotel, to wit, Georgian Towers Motor Hotel."

Relatives calm hysterical mother

Mother's Bitter Cry: 'Killed Like a Dog'

MEMPHIS—The mother of a 16-year-old Negro boy slain during last week's rioting threw herself on his coffin before it was lowered into the grave Tuesday screaming, "Oh, don't let them put him down."

Four men pulled her from the casket. She fainted and was carried to a limousine.

SHOTGUN BLAST

Police contend the victim, Larry Payne, one of eight children, was shot to death while carrying a television set from a looted store. Relatives said the youth had surrendered and had his hands up when he was killed by a shotgun blast fired by patrolman L. D. Jones standing only a few feet away.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Mason Payne, became hysterical at the funeral services and stood before the casket sobbing: "Larry, oh Larry, they killed you like a dog."

A dreary, intermittent rain fell while the funeral was in progress, and a convoy of police cars cruised the streets outside Clayborn Temple, guarding against any new trouble.

The services concluded without incident, however, and the 300 mourners quickly dispersed after the white and gold casket was lowered into the earth beneath a canvas awning.

Payne was killed in the violence that erupted following a protest march led last Thursday by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The announced purpose of the march was to back up garbage collectors, most of whom are Negroes, in their demands for pay increases, and to protest alleged discrimination directed toward them.

'This Is Our Last Chance'

Quebecer Fears Canadian Vietnam

PARIS (CP-Reuters) — A French-speaking Canadian said Tuesday independent-minded organizations must form a united front and take over French-Canada in the Quebec elections of 1970.

Andre Dagenais said in a press conference here that unless there is a peaceful takeover in 1970 the extremist leaders will sweep into action.

If that happens, he said, "we will then face another Algerian war of independence or a bigger Vietnam war."

"This is our last chance."

GENERAL COMMITTEE

Dagenais is a member of the general committee of the Estates General of French Canada, a private organization founded in 1961 with representatives from a variety of organizations, including school boards, professional organizations, nationalist societies, trade unions and chambers of commerce.

Dagenais also called for French help to save Montreal from being "absorbed" by Anglo-Americans in the next five years.

He said he senses "an alarming slackening" of France's help to French-speaking Canada since President de Gaulle's visit last July. That visit ended abruptly after the Canadian government rejected remarks by de Gaulle at a public gathering which included "Vive le Quebec libre"—generally regarded as an independence slogan.

Dagenais also criticized Quebec Premier Johnson for not doing enough for the province.

He said negotiations now are under way to bring various independent-minded parties together. This would be a "long and painful" process.

Before coming to France he had met with representatives of the Rassemblement pour l'indépendance nationale, the Mouvement Association and the Ralliement national.

He also was seeking to rally the Fleurs de Lys Clubs, Société St. Jean Baptiste, Club Pierre Le Moyne d'Iberville and other organizations he described as sympathetic.

He sensed "an alarming slackening" of France's help to French-Canada and a corresponding stiffening of the Anglo-Saxon camp in its bid to capture Quebec's economic, social and cultural stronghold in Montreal.

"Frenchmen must cease to be Gaullist or anti-Gaullist and help us achieve our independence."

Premier Johnson was not doing enough for Quebec's cause.

The premier was "treated medically and financially" during his stay in Hawaii last year, Dagenais said, and the Canadian provincial premiers conference in Ottawa earlier this year resulted in an "unending constitutional Panmunjom."

These talks were likely to drag on from three to five years—"the time the Anglo-Saxons think they need to swing Montreal into their camp through economic control and massive immigration."

Premier Johnson was playing into their hands and financiers in Toronto and New York were reassured.

Dagenais said he believes Johnson's scheduled trip to Paris this spring was postponed until the autumn, "and I am not sure he is likely to visit France this year, and if he does come, he will go sight-seeing."

Johnson, who paid an official visit to France early last year and greeted de Gaulle in Quebec and Montreal last July, is to meet the French president in Paris around Easter.

Mainland Firms Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Vancouver firms Tuesday were fined a total of $20,000 for violating the Combines Act on shipments to Eastern Canada.

Overland Import Agencies Ltd. (Leimar Forwarding Company) was fined $10,000. J. W. Mills and Son Ltd. and Kuehne and Nagel (Canada) Ltd. were fined $5,000 each in Exchange Court.

Two firms acquitted were Deming Freight Forwarders Ltd. and Johnston Terminals Ltd. Mr. Justice H. F. Gibson of Ottawa presided.

Charges covered the period between Jan. 1, 1956, and Aug. 1, 1966, and alleged that the accused unlawfully conspired to unduly limit facilities for transporting or dealing in articles imported from the Orient and forwarded to Eastern Canada by railway pool car.

Mr. Justice Gibson said Deming entered the business after Leimar and Mills and began to cut into business of the other two firms to such an extent they agreed to institute a rate war which forced Deming out of business.

Husband Slept in Cellar, Wife with Pet Wildcat

TORONTO (UPI) — On Monday, R. W. Williamson's ex-wife testified she slept with a female Mexican ocelot to protect her from Williamson, who slept in the basement during their marriage from 1963 to 1966.

On Tuesday, Magistrate Charles Oppen declared Williamson legally sane and adjourned a committal hearing initiated by the ex-wife's present husband, Dr. William Feasby. The judge ordered Williamson and Mr. Feasby to stay away from each other in future.

Oppen said that "from the evidence offered, there is not enough to commit this man ... this hearing has heard of some rather bizarre behavior, but in dealing with the freedom of the individual, extreme care should be exercised."

Mrs. Feasby, 43, herself a doctor, was the only witness at the two-day hearing. She married Feasby three months after her marriage to Williamson was annulled on grounds of non-consummation.

The woman doctor started the court Monday when she testified she slept with her pet ocelot, Shag, a spotted Mexican wildcat, while her former husband, a chartered accountant, slept on a cot in the basement.

"You can't live in a house where there is no love and affection," she told the sanity hearing. The Feasbys sought to have Williamson committed under the mental health act because of alleged telephone calls and letters to Mrs. Feasby since her annulment.

Troops Patrol Bloodied Rio To Keep Order 'At All Cost'

RIO DE JANEIRO (LAT) — Troops in battle dress, their weapons at the ready, occupied downtown Rio Tuesday following a bloody night of rioting and the most serious challenge yet to four years of military government in Brazil.

As officials debated the wisdom of declaring a state of siege, health authorities reported that scores of wounded were being treated. At least 200 men and women were said to have been arrested.

President Artur da Costa Silva, a retired army marshal, issued a statement insisting that order will be maintained at all cost "for we will deteriorate into an unwanted regime of force."

TANKS MISSING

There was no lack of force Tuesday. Machineguns and automatic rifles were positioned outside government buildings which had been ringed by marines and air force troops carrying carbines and rifles with fixed bayonets.

Motorized patrols rolled through the streets. Tanks that had clanked into the city the night before were no longer in sight, however.

Occupation of the downtown sector was ordered by Justice Minister Luis Gama Silva late Monday after rioting students and their followers had turned the area into a smoking, tear gas-clouded battleground.

Ironically, the incident that touched off the violence centred on a relatively minor issue: complaints about conditions in a downtown student cafeteria. These led to plans for a protest rally, military police intervention and the fatal shooting of a student last Thursday night.

By the time the tanks moved in Monday, open rebellion had flared, with echoes reverberating over much of this huge country.

Left Wing Confronts Gaullists

PARIS (UPI) — The French Parliament began its spring session Tuesday and immediately a united left and Communist opposition served notice they will try to force its dissolution with a censure motion after Easter.

After a hastily-summoned caucus, the federation of the left and Communist blocs in the National Assembly — with 193 votes between them — announced plans for a full-scale challenge to Gaullist economic and social policy when the assembly returns from an Easter break.

The threat to the Gaullist government of Premier Georges Pompidou provided an undercurrent of excitement to an otherwise ceremonial opening.

The topic chosen for the censure vote — economic and social measures — was believed to be the only one on which the 120 leftist and 73 Communist deputies could reach total agreement.

Both groups are enraged over growing unemployment in France, now estimated at 450,000.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson replied the act sets out maximum penalties but NDP

Hams Send SOS

Announcement of a 300-per cent increase in the amateur radio licence fees has prompted operators here to send out an SOS of protest to Ottawa.

"There was no explanation for the increase," said O. H. Evans, president of the Victoria Short Wave Club. "We certainly weren't expecting it. I don't think we would have said a word, even if it had been raised to $5."

Originally the fees were $2.50. Now the rate is $10.

A protest telegram sent to Prime Minister Pearson and Transport Minister Paul Hellyer reads: "On behalf of the Victoria Short Wave Club and radio amateurs in general we wish to protest strongly the increase of 300-per cent in the annual cost of amateur fees, considering that the radio amateur operator pays an import duty of 51 per cent on his equipment, none of which is manufactured in Canada, and considering that the equipment used in his hobby is available and used to a great extent in the public service of Canada."

FERRY STRIKE

Leo Nimsick (NDP-Kootenay) cited the recent ferry workers' strike where the employees refused to go back to work after the government had threatened to fire them.

"This is the most vicious section in the whole Act," said Mr. Nimsick. "You are putting the threat of $1,000 against the poor working man if he refuses to go to work."

Just before the debate in committee ended Opposition Leader Robert Strachan read telegram from the joint executive board of the B.C. Hotel and Restaurant Workers claiming that body had never endorsed Bill 33. He said later this union body was the only one previously cited by Mr. Peterson as favoring the new labor legislation.

PRESS REPORT

The minister made no direct reply but told Mr. Strachan he had only quoted from a press report.

Bill 33 is a proclamation bill which will not take effect when the government's legislative program gets royal assent at the session's end. A cabinet order will give it force later this year.

Speech Winner

Mrs. Irene Brynjolfson, whose topic was Off to Market, won the Capital City Speakers Group annual competition Monday night. Judged second was Gary Cleland and Norman Curbishley was third.

Coast Guard in B.C.

Hovercraft Soon

The Canada Coast Guard will receive a hovercraft for rescue work in B.C. waters in June, the British Hovercraft Corp. announced Tuesday in London, England.

The $490,000 vessel will be based at Vancouver International Airport.

Transport department officials in B.C. had originally expected delivery of the hovercraft in April. They said the department seriously began considering the purchase after three persons were killed Jan. 2, 1966, when an aircraft plunged off the end of a Vancouver airport runway into marshy water.

The crash occurred in water too shallow for boats but too deep for land vehicles. The hovercraft is capable of operating under such conditions.

It will work mainly in the Gulf of Georgia area and will rarely be brought to Victoria, an official said.

The amphibious craft will be shipped aboard a freighter to Vancouver, the British Hovercraft Corp. said.

It is a Warden SR. N5 class hovercraft, the first purchased in Canada, and floats on a cushion of air.

It will be equipped with side decking, scrambling nets, and fire-fighting, radar and radio equipment.

Child Centres Aided

The provincial government has approved a capital grant of $29,329 toward the cost of three homes for problem children acquired by the Greater Victoria Family and Children's Service.

The grant, one of three affecting Vancouver Island, was announced outside the legislature Tuesday by Welfare Minister Dan Campbell.

The minister said the three homes in this area are located at 1250 Balmoral, 1040 Princess Avenue and 5191 Jersey Road.

Another grant of $15,666 was made toward the capital cost of the Comox Valley group living home which will accommodate 12 to 16 youngsters.

Mr. Campbell said the provincial grants amounted to one third of the total acquisition or construction costs for this type of accommodation.

Nanaimo Family Life Centre, which has played a major role in local efforts to co-ordinate available community resources for welfare purposes, gets a $2,000 grant toward operating expenses.

Mr. Campbell said all three grants represented recognition by the government of the value of community involvement in placement services.

Securities Officials Understaffed—NDP

The Securities Commission in Vancouver is understaffed, according to Tom Berger (NDP—Vancouver Burrard). He made the statement Tuesday during second reading of an amendment to the Securities Act, designed to extend the powers of the Securities Commission.

He said he agreed with the intent of the act, but said the Vancouver commission is "understaffed and undermanned."

"The commission is not equipped with the personnel that would enable it to police securities dealings in the province," he said.

Mrs. Harling holds tiny hummingbird

—Jim Ryan

Hummingbird Revived After Persian Pawing

By JIM BRAHAN

A cat-mauled hummingbird owed its fragile life Tuesday to the kindness of a Langford woman.

The tiny orange-and-crimson bird was brought into the kitchen of Mrs. Myra Harling about noon by her Persian cat, Louie.

"I revived the bird by sprinkling it with drops of water and holding it in my hand," Mrs. Harling said.

The bird, although it appeared bedraggled, was rescued early enough, and is to be let loose this morning after a night's rest.

However, this has not always been the case when one of Mrs. Harling's four cats totes home a bird as a prize trophy.

Six years ago a robin was hauled into the kitchen after losing to one of the cats, and has been a star boarder ever since.

his body. The doctor told me that more than likely the bird would die. But he has lived for six years now, which I think is unusual when they only live two or three years in the wild."

Mrs. Harling said the bird can't fly, but can hop like a frog.

Since the robin took up permanent residence, her cats have added other boarders to the household at 741 Goldstream. These include a starling which has an insatiable appetite for apples.

"I haven't the heart to kill anything, so what am I supposed to do with the things the cats bring home? I look after it and either it lives or dies," she said.

One item she refuses to keep in the house is a snake.

Spring Fair

Annual spring fair of the Margaret Jenkins Parent-Teacher Association will be held Friday from 6:30 p.m. to 9 in the school auditorium.

"Every year, the cats bring in dozens and dozens of snakes," she said. "I sweep them into a dustpan and put them outside, but if they are still alive I hide them from the cats."

Another favorite pet around her home is a pigeon, also with a broken wing. This was not brought in by the cats, but was given to her by a friend.

She said the pigeon was in terrible shape when it arrived, but like the other wounded bird, its wing was taped and finally mended.

"I had to keep her wing in an elastic sling for a long time after the tape was removed," Mrs. Harling explained.

"I'm sure they could fly again if I knew how to set their wings, but I don't," she added.

Asked why she didn't get rid of her cats, she said, "They are strays, too, and just wandered into my home and were made welcome. But," she added, "if they ever leave they will not be replaced. You can't look after dogs or cats when you live near a highway."

Yarrows Acquitted on Third

Yard Guilty on Two Counts In Wake of Fatal Blaze

By BRIAN DOHERTY

Yarrows Ltd. was convicted in central magistrate's court Tuesday on two counts laid under the accident prevention regulations and fined $500 on each. The company was found not guilty on a third count.

Magistrate J. A. Byers found Yarrows guilty of permitting hot work to be done where there was likelihood of any flammable substance being present; and failure to ensure work was carried out without undue risk to a person or persons.

Circus Aids Handicapped

Victoria City Policemen's Union annual charity circus will be held May 13 to 16 in Esquimalt Sports Centre. The two-hour show will start at 4:30 and 8 p.m., with the money going to the Handicapped Children's Clinic, Queen Alexandra Solarium, Victoria Boys' Club and the City Police Youth Band.

Anti-Sign Action Mapped

A special membership meeting of the Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterway Society has been called to decide what action should be taken against the Metropolitan Board of Health for placarding the waterway.

"The society has sought medical opinion and has been advised that the posting of placards (banning swimming) is unlikely to have any effect on the incidence of hepatitis in the future," the society says in a four-page, single-spaced letter to its members.

Only nine cases of infectious hepatitis reported during last year's outbreak had contact with Gorge water.

However, hundreds of other people are known to have swum in the Gorge all last summer without contracting the disease, it says.

The society, which is holding the meeting at 8 p.m. April 16 in Craigflower school, is afraid that if the estuary is labelled as a source of infectious hepatitis it will be downgraded indefinitely.

Victorian Backs Trudeau

A Victoria delegate to the Liberal leadership convention in Ottawa this week, declared just before he left that he will vote for Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Frank Preston, who ran unsuccessfully on the Liberal ticket in Victoria in the last provincial election, said he has met all the candidates who came to Victoria. The only two he hasn't met are Robert Winters and Joseph Greene.

"I think Trudeau's ideas have the widest acceptance of the Canadian public," Mr. Preston said.

"I feel he is the one who is most able to achieve the policies and goals that I hold important as a Canadian."

WELDER KILLED

The charges were laid by the Workmen's Compensation Board following a fire aboard the barge Sept. 7 in which welder Steve Williams died.

Magistrate Byers dismissed a defence contention on the second count—the failure to institute tests—that the offence was not known to law and that the employer could not be held responsible for the wrongful acts of employees.

The magistrate said there was no evidence that the precautions taken by the company when Insulmastic was being sprayed were inadequate.

NO THOUGHT

"But no thought seems to have ever been given to the possibility of an explosive fire caused by the careless conduct of a lone welder tacking up (doing odd job work) on his own."

Evidence was given during the trial that a welder welded a nipple on the barge at the request of an electrician. However, fresh Insulmastic was on the other side of the bulkhead and the fatal fire broke out.

"There appears to have been no method of ensuring with certainty that there were no welders working close to the spraying operation," the magistrate said.

OVERLAPPING

"To that extent, I hold that the welding was being done where there was a likelihood of the presence of a flammable or explosive substance, in the absence of a suitable procedure to ensure the safe performance of the work within the meaning of . . . the regulations."

The magistrate said there was some overlapping of the third count (failure to ensure work was carried out with undue risk) over the second as far as failure to carry out suitable procedures under the regulations.

"But there is another aspect which has to be considered, and that is the inadequacy and complete failure of the fire-fighting equipment."

NO ONE ON DUTY

"There does not appear to have been any man on duty nearby properly equipped and ready to cope with any sudden fire occurring while this highly dangerous spraying was going on."

"The fire extinguishers available on the barge were of no use against a fire of these dimensions, although quite adequate to deal with a small fire caused by the cured Insulmastic catching fire under the heat of a welder's torch during subsequent small welding work."

"I would hold that the fire precautions taken by the employers for this type of work were quite inadequate."

SUGGESTION

At the end of his judgment, Magistrate Byers said: "In the course of the argument, a suggestion was put forward that perhaps this work (spraying) could be done with no welders or burners on the ship at all, possibly during a night shift."

"I may have misunderstood learned counsel's reply to this suggestion, but it is to be hoped that the task of taking better and more effective precautions to avoid a fire of this type when hot work and the spraying of Insulmastic are being carried out simultaneously is not to be measured by the necessity of keeping shipbuilding costs down to a competitive level."

John Macintyre appeared for the crown and Louis Lindholm for Yarrows Ltd.

Saanich Will Rename Park After Land Philanthropist

By DON GAIN

Broadmead Park is to be renamed Horner Park in honor of the late A. E. Horner, former Saanich council and school board member, who gave land for the park on two occasions.

Saanich parks and outdoor recreation committee Tuesday night voted to recommend the name change to council.

"Mr. Horner took a keen interest in the affairs of Saanich during his lifetime," L. D. Hall of 1710 Midgard wrote in a letter suggesting the change "on behalf of many local families."

"At the conclusion of his long life he willed additional property to Broadmead Park. (The organization of this park was made possible in 1954 when Mr. Horner donated several lots.)"

Mr. Horner, who died last Oct. 18 at 92, took part in the first dedication ceremonies of Gore Memorial Park on Shelbourne Street on July 19, 1919.

Horner

He was also there for a rededication in 1961. Mr. Horner, a landscape gardener, came to Saanich in 1912 and the same year helped survey Shelbourne Street.

A native of Whitby, Yorkshire, he came to Canada in 1911 with the assurance of employment by B.C. Horticultural Estates, a firm operating along the Thompson River.

Things didn't work out to his liking on the mainland and the next year he moved to Saanich. He lived on Rowland's Farm which was situated where Kisser Avenue now is.

He was elected to Saanich council in 1920 and was representative on the Victoria-Saanich parks board. As a trustee, he advocated the appointment of a school nurse with the appointee coming from the district.

Miss Kate McRae, chosen for the job, was probably the first public health nurse appointed in North America.

Mr. Horner was married in England in 1903. His wife, Emma Elizabeth, died here in 1952. Their daughter, Kathleen, teaches school in Victoria.

Kindergartens Due For 300 in Sooke

Kindergarten comes to Sooke school district this September—for the first 300 children to be registered.

Three kindergartens will be set up to serve all areas of the school district, Trustee Isabelle Reader said Tuesday.

They will be at Savory, Colwood and Sooke elementary schools, she said.

An announcement to elementary principals said that it might be necessary to limit enrolment to the first 300 to register.

Board chairman John Bartanus estimated there would be about 500 five-year-olds in the district next fall.

Parents will be required to provide transportation.

Mr. Bartanus, in a formal announcement, said that establishment of kindergartens followed the government's decision to grant full financial support to kindergartens. Previously they received half the grant of an elementary school class.

The kindergarten at Savory Elementary will serve Langford, Savory, Millstream and the north portion of the Glen Lake attendance area.

Colwood kindergarten will serve Colwood, Sangster, Happy Valley, Metchoin and the south-west part of the Glen Lake attendance area.

The Sooke kindergarten will accommodate children from Sooke, Jordan River and Saseenos.

In Greater Victoria school district, superintendent Joseph Chell said Tuesday that the more generous government financial support would make no difference to the area's kindergarten program.

There is no space for additional kindergartens, Mr. Chell explained.

Saanich school board chairman Nora Lindsay said the district planned to add a sixth kindergarten this September. Location hasn't been settled, Mrs. Lindsay added.

Aldermen Catching Up

Spending Estimates Sliced

By A. H. MURPHY

Proposed capital expenditures for the city public works department were sliced in half Tuesday by aldermen, in a belated effort to cut 1968 spending estimates down to reasonable proportions.

With cost estimates about $1,000,000 higher than in 1967, members of city council knifed the spending forecasts of the public works and parks department with the obvious intention of making up for lost time.

In the past three cost-cutting sessions, little has been trimmed. In some departments, in fact, there have been additions rather than cuts.

It was freely predicted Tuesday at City Hall that some drastic action was going to be necessary if the tax line was to be held this year.

City engineer James Garnett submitted capital spending estimates amounting to $423,497. When aldermen finished with them, they were reduced by $262,115.

LIFEGUARD, FIRE

Discussing park estimates on Tuesday, Mayor Hugh Stephen said he was going to ask the regional board of the capital district to take over Theis Lake

Park as part of its acquisition program.

The decision followed in the wake of the parks committee decision to do no more than was absolutely necessary in Theis Lake Park this year. Lifeguard duty and fire patrol were all that aldermen were willing to pay for.

"I feel strongly about this," said City Manager Dennis Young. "I feel that the money we spend on parks should be spent on the properties within our borders."

Mayor Stephen agreed. "I think this matter should be tabled until I can approach the regional board at its next meeting and ask what the possibilities are of the regional district taking over the park," the mayor said.

INTEREST UNCERTAIN

At an earlier meeting, the mayor said he was not certain that the regional board would be interested in taking over Theis Lake Park.

Although the mayor did not say so, the reason for the regional board's reluctance was that its letters patent authorized it to "acquire" parkland, but not necessarily to maintain it. Upkeep of Theis Lake Park is about $15,000 a year and the board would probably not be prepared to undertake the responsibility.

Oak Bay Blitz Leads Solarium Fund Drive

Last year, the Queen Alexandra Solarium gave free treatment worth $36,340 to 32 children from the Victoria area.

During the coming month, it is asking for only $25,000 of that back.

On behalf of some 60 children with crippling and often chronic diseases, members of the Solarium Junior League open their campaign next Monday with a blitz of Oak Bay.

EXPECT GENEROSITY

"It is the first area to be covered, and we are expecting a high level of generosity from the residents," said spokesman for the junior league. "We feel sure other municipalities will follow with equal generosity."

Esquimalt will be canvassed April 16, Saanich on April 22 and Victoria on April 29. Apartment-dwellers will be canvassed by mail throughout the month.

ACROSS PROVINCE

The Solarium last year had a deficit of $148,855, which is almost equivalent to the value of the free treatment it gave to a total of 59 children from all over the province, including the 32 from Victoria.

The deficit presents a particularly grave situation this year, because during 1967 the institution received only $42,000 in bequests. It had budgeted for about $100,000, which is what it has been bequeathed on the average during recent years.

VERY MINIMUM

This month's Spring Shower campaign has an objective of $150,000 from everywhere in B.C., which Junior League spokesmen say is the very minimum needed to maintain the Solarium's standard of care.

The children to whom free treatment is given are those whose diagnoses do not qualify them for B.C. Hospital Insurance Service care.

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

The rate that fashion shows are being held these days seems as if everyone is rushing to get in before the great Easter Parade.

The shows at the Yacht Club this afternoon and evening promise to be of the best. Sponsored by St. Margaret's Old Girls' Association, fashions will be from Eaton's.

Mrs. G. R. Pearkes, herself an Old Girl of the school will officiate at the afternoon opening and Miss Ruth Jones will open the evening show. This afternoon at the head table with Mrs. Pearkes (Rhytha Copeman) will be former school mates, Mrs. P. J. Steel (Barbara Bullock-Webster), Mrs. T. G. Ely Margaret Berwick), Mrs. Arthur Pitts, (Alice Nash), Mrs. James Gray (Nelle Turner), Mrs. G. C. Grant (Faith Leader), Mrs. E. H. W. Elkington (Margaret Springett), and Mrs. Kathleen Irving (Appleton).

Also at head table will be Mrs. Deryk French, headmistress, Miss Phyllis Davis and Margaret Smith, members of the teaching staff and conveners, Mrs. T. H. Butler, Mrs. John Alexis and Miss Paula Lovric.

Perfect Weather

The weather couldn't have been more perfect for the spring opening of the Ladies Division of the Oak Bay Golf Club. To prove that warm, sunny days really will bring people out — there were 78 golfers on the links and 108 at the informal luncheon that followed.

After the luncheon, Margaret Todd, captain, presented prizes to winners of the two ball sixes who had played in the morning. Low gross winners were Beasley Wilson, Betty Hart and Glad Simmons. Second low gross, Renee Robbins, Peggy McDonald and Kay Markham. Low net — Trudy Munro, Evelyn Brown and Day MacGillivray. Second low, Julie Thompson, Marjorie Burrage and Dorothy Mulcahy.

Prizes for the highest individual score was won by Ardeth Hessel-Green, first, Bob Gilles and Lillian Kent.

Margaret Todd and her committee, Marjorie Burrage, Aline Wintemute, Helen Mooney, Sidney Boyd, Betty Stoneham and Claudia Morrow had arranged the lovely flowers in the dining room. Aline Wintemute also convened the luncheon.

"I've never seen the lounge and other rooms look so lovely, the flowers were absolutely beautiful," says Margaret Todd.

Responsible for this were Bunny Dunn, Margaret Mayhew, Marg Cameron, Peg Husband and Phyllis Means.

Picked for Course

Asked if he was surprised that he had been one of 35 students picked for a special summer science course, Alistair Murdoch replied, "Well, I'm happy, I was hoping for it."

Alistair, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Murdoch, 3330 Woodburn, is one out of six chosen in B.C.

The Royal Canadian Institute offers this summer science programme to talented students, showing a special aptitude for science and mathematics from Grades 11 and 12 in secondary schools across Canada.

The students will take part in a program consisting of instruction in science and mathematics with projects, discussions, lectures and demonstrations in the fields of astronomy, geology, chemistry, physics, psychology, mathematics, statistics and computer science.

For six weeks, starting July 8, they will have contact with outstanding university teachers and research scientists from non-academic institutions.

Dry Cleaning Experts Shun Tedious Chores

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — If you have been taking sewn-on hooks off curtains and taking weights out of their hems before you send them to the cleaners, you have been wasting time.

That's an old-fashioned chore, says John Dillon, assistant manager of the Dry Cleaners and Launderers Institute, Ontario.

"Most modern operators can cover hooks and fold curtains so they aren't flopping around in the vats. You don't need to take the weights out."

He says about the only way a consumer can tell these days whether an item should be dry cleaned or washed is to check the label, and the time to do that is when you buy.

"Most fabrics can be cleaned or laundered, but there are some that have bits in them that exclude both possibilities."

One of the jobs of the Institute is to try to advise the trade and to do laboratory checks, but not until after the worst has happened, to find out why it did happen.

Mr. Dillon says the federal government has been investigating fabric labelling and he hopes there will soon be a labelling system that will tell consumer and cleaner without fail how to look after the item.

Another current problem is buttons. Mr. Dillon says it is no longer easy to be sure whether or not a plastic button will melt or run or otherwise cause problems. He suggests that when you buy a garment with special buttons or doubtful ones, you consider whether you should take them all off every time you send it to be cleaned or washed.

"Some places will ask you to take them off at the counter."

If you stain clothes, furniture, rugs, you may not be able to have them cleaned immediately, but the sooner the better is the rule. And, Mr. Dillon says, be cautious about applying temporary home remedies.

"The people who offer household hints on how to remove stains usually neglect to say their suggested formula might cause other damage."

When you do take a stained article to a cleaner, either attach a note to it explaining what you think the stain is and when it happened or be sure the clerk writes the information on the order.

Once you have winter things clean, the institute recommends careful storage to keep them in good condition until next year.

If they have no wool in them, you don't need to worry about mothproofing. If they have any wool in them, the safest way to store them is in sealed containers with some kind of anti-moth agent.

Wool or not, they should be stored in a dry place to prevent mildew and preferably in a cool place. The institute recommends commercial cold storage as the safest way to store furs.

They also urge that you choose a reputable dry cleaner and launderer as another way to keep your cleaning problems at a minimum.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a married woman with an infant son. My husband (age 30) has a habit that turns my stomach. Every time he sees his father (which is about once a week) they kiss each other hello.

Don't you feel a handshake or a slap on the back makes more sense? To be kissing one's father at age 30 seems peculiar to me.

My husband knows I am writing this letter, in fact he will read it before it goes into the envelope. We both want your opinion. —NAUSEATED NANCY

Dear Nauseated: Kissing parents is strictly a matter of family training. I see nothing peculiar about a grown man greeting his father in this manner. Instead of being nauseated, Nancy, be thankful that your husband and his dad enjoy a warm relationship — it will help your husband have a better relationship with his own son. Today the generation gap in a good many families makes the Grand Canyon look like a small ditch.

Cigar Band Ring

Dear Ann Landers: Last week my boyfriend put a cigar band around my finger and said, "We're engaged." It seemed romantic at the time but now I fear that romantic gesture may be a symbol of what our life together will be — never enough money for the real thing. Always substituted.

Rickey is warm-hearted, attractive, fun to be with, but moody. He's a loner and a drifter. He drinks more than he should and I'm sure this is the main reason he can't hold a job. Rickey's parents have been divorced for 10 years. His mother collects alimony and has a good-paying job. He can always get money from her. Frequently she'll stay home from work so she can nurse his hangover and fix him a big breakfast.

Last night when I heard Rick ask his mother for $3 to buy gas I got a little sick to my stomach. He says if I will marry him he won't have to drink, that he'll be able to stay on a job and make a go of things. Yes or no? —JESSICA

Dear Jess: Don't expect a little ceremony to transform an immature, irresponsible kid into a solid, productive adult. Rickey's mother has kept her sonny boy weak and dependent because she needed to be needed. Methinks he sees in you a girl just like the girl who married dear old dad.

Say no unless you want to carry this emotional cripple on your back for the rest of your days.

Confidential to No Satisfaction Without Love: Wake up, Dummy. Your friend wasn't looking for love — he was looking for satisfaction. A person who isn't interested in values, substance or permanence may well settle for satisfaction and ignore everything else.

Past Preoccupies Designer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) Thea Van Runkle's studio is littered with 1948 fashion magazines. On the wall, a 1930s-style Faye Dunaway glares out of a Bonnie and Clyde poster.

Thea, the chic designer whose Bonnie and Clyde fashions became "the look" of the year and won her an Academy Award nomination, is preoccupied with the past. But she also digs the present, alternating her mini- and mid-skirts with abandon. "The wonderful thing about the 1960s," says Thea, "is that people suddenly realize you don't have to be Rita Hayworth to be a groovy woman. "It's an era when anything goes. If your fat and bossy, people say you have a maternal quality. If you're skinny and flat-chested then they say you look sensitive. A woman can be anything she wants to be!" And Theadora Van Runkle, tall, lithe and red-haired with cat-green eyes and definite opinions, is obviously the woman she wants to be. When Thea enters a room, heads turn. Rocketed to national prominence in little more than a year — after years of mouldering away as an advertising illustrator — Thea says the sudden success is no surprise. From the start, Thea knew she was going to drop a bomb on the fashion industry. "The timing was right. Women were ready for this look. I knew it."

Q Mrs. E. R. asks Canadian Carpet Clinic "What can I do? A very good friend of mine spilled coffee on my carpet and the stain shows plainly. She's embarrassed each time she sees it."

The Dark Stain...

Is likely more than just coffee. Tannin, sugar, cellulose browning—all of these can produce a permanent stain. Call your professional carpet cleaner (preferably a member of the National Institute of Rug Cleaning) for advice. The next time a friend spills liquid on your carpet, take immediate action to soak up all of the excess fluid and lay about 1/2" of clean white tissues or toweling on it until you find out what to do from there. This is the time to consult a "know-how cleaner." It will save embarrassment later—yours and your friends.

If You Have a Question about care and cleaning of carpets, bring it to our special booth at:

I Longed for Soft, Warm Sunshine

By Dr. PHILIP BLAIBERG

When I woke up this morning it seemed just like the old days again. I was so happy. I felt as if I had never been in the hospital. The operation, and the miserable months of sickness that preceded it, seemed nothing more than a dream.

All I longed for during those lazy moments of waking and dressing was the warm touch of soft sunshine on my face, and the smell of fresh air.

And although the same clean air had been pumped into my isolation ward in the hospital, it never seemed to smell quite the same.

You see, I love the outdoor life. I suppose this stems from my childhood, and my days playing Rugby as a student. That is why, during my confinement to our flat, the little balcony outside will mean so much to me. There I can stand and breathe deeply. I will never forget the excitement of leaving Groote Schuur Hospital — just three months after I was admitted with my failing heart.

At that time I never ever thought I would leave the hospital alive. Death, then, would have been a happy release.

But that Saturday it was wonderful to find so many people waiting to wish me well. When some of the nurses and staff applauded as I passed, I could have wept with joy.

Even so, I still cannot understand why people should wish to treat me as a hero. What have I done to deserve it? Nothing.

You may think me falsely modest, but that is the way I feel. Frankly, never has anyone done so little to achieve so much notoriety.

Some people have said I was brave. But where does bravery come into this? The truth is that when I entered the hospital last December I was on the edge of death.

When Professor Barnard offered me the chance of a new heart, I took it because there was no other alternative. It was a case of Hobson's choice.

By that time I had become indifferent to life, and my indifference was a source of strength to me at that time. I was lucky. The operation quite literally snatched me from the jaws of death. And those terrible days of suffering when I had to fight for breath, were over.

Professor Barnard, of course, is a brilliant surgeon. There can be no doubt about that.

After the operation he showed me my old heart, preserved in a plastic case, and we examined it. The bulk of the tissue was badly damaged, just as if it were hanging together by a thread. In fact Professor Thompson, the pathologist, said he could have sworn it had been removed from a corpse.

For nine months before the operation I had been like a carp — the fish we catch in our lakes and which you can keep alive by plunging it in and out of water. That is exactly how I felt. I, too, kept gasping for air.

At that time I was under the outpatient care of Professor Schriener, the cardiologist, and I asked him about my chances. He said: "It will depend on your reserves."

The heart has remarkable powers of recovery. It did rally for a while. Then six weeks before the operation it started to fail.

It was only when Professor Barnard gave me the plastic container, and I became the first man to literally hold his heart in his hand, that I saw how bad it really was.

As a dentist I have had some basic grounding in medicine — and now I think I also know quite a bit about cardiology. But I realize that I have entered that no-man's land where there is no precedent and where everyone has to feel their way.

When it was all over, I accepted the success of the operation immediately. Yet I also accepted the danger of my own tissues rejecting those of the new heart. I used to think to myself "At least I will die in comfort this time."

The trouble was, of course, that there were no means of establishing how the rejection would manifest itself. These are all situations one has to face during a period when heart-transplantation is still in its infancy.

Yet, I believe they can be faced, if you give the team your confidence and co-operation. The most important thing is your determination to help yourself.

The way I kept going was to set myself weekly targets, from Saturday to Saturday, and I used to get quite a kick out of reaching the target.

The physiotherapist would give me exercises to get my leg muscles working. At first

Lifts Faces Out Of Lines and Wrinkles

Most mothers, of any age, now can know the thrill of a 2nd Debut by letting an amazing discovery lift their faces out of the ugly zone of lines and wrinkles at home the new way. It's the Wiesbaden Discovery called CEF 600 and 1200 double strength blended into the new skin lotion called 2nd Debut. Moisture is carried under the wrinkled skin layers to push up and out. Once again skin is smooth, soft and so much younger looking most mothers call it a 2nd Debut. Most drug and department stores feature 2nd Debut. Results are almost immediate. ... Lila Hamilton

Sooner or later, that day comes, the day when a woman feels she's changing. It's not a good feeling either. And she could use a good old-fashioned medicine then.

Could be you feel a little edgy, or maybe cross. You might even have what we call hot flashes and feel sad and slightly off-balance.

Whatever you feel, we have something for the day you need a little comforting. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle ingredients that work to give you a better sense of well-being. A sense of well-being you might lose when you start changing.

With an old-fashioned problem like this, couldn't you use an old-fashioned medicine?

Watch Air and Water In Low-Calorie Foods

By DOROTHY WHITE

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Air and water, both without calories, are just two of the elements producing public confusion over low-calorie products, according to Dorothy Wenck, University of California extension service home adviser.

In explanation, Mrs. Wenck said, "A low-calorie margarine does have only half as many calories as regular margarine because of its water content. Federal labeling regulations would not allow a company to market a product with this statement if it were not true."

"What the consumer needs to find out is why it has fewer calories. The answer is on the label."

The ingredient listed first on the low-calorie margarine label, Mrs. Wenck pointed out, is water. If the consumer checks a regular margarine label, she will find water or skim milk, which contains water, usually third or fourth in the list of ingredients — after liquid and partially hardened vegetable oils.

(For those finding it difficult to keep up with the new laws, she explained, "according to law now, the label must list the ingredients in descending order of quantity with the ingredient present in greatest quantity listed first, and so on.")

Already getting less fat for her money, the consumer gets even less when the cost of the low-calorie margarine is higher than that of regular, Mrs. Wenck said.

Water is a factor in another popular misconception that solid fats have the same number of calories as liquid fats, namely oil. Margarine, butter and other solid shortenings have 100 calories per tablespoon. Oil has 125 calories per tablespoon. The difference is the water incorporated in the manufacturing of solid fats, the nutritionist said.

In describing how "air" is involved in the calorie question, Mrs. Wenck said, "Non-dairy dessert toppings depend upon air for their success just as dairy whipping cream does. But there is a difference. In most cases, the non-dairy products have the capacity to whip to a greater volume (or are expanded by an aerosol device to a greater volume) than an equal amount of whipping cream."

Therefore, if, before it is whipped, the non-dairy product is already lower in calories than the same amount of whipping cream, it will be even lower, proportionately, in the whipped state — because of greater air content.

"You are eating air," said Mrs. Wenck. "You are not getting too much (of value) to eat," she emphasized.

The home economics expert advised the normal Dieter to cut down on fat in general.

Fat reduction is more effective and faster than either carbohydrate or protein reduction. She mentioned nonfat milk, cottage cheese and whipped creamed cottage cheese, in place of sour cream, as smart choices for the weight-watcher.

Another consumer confusion which Mrs. Wenck would like to clarify is the terms "imitation," "diet" and "low calorie."

"Imitation sour cream," "imitation milk" and "diet margarine" are not necessarily lower in calories than their counterparts. In most cases there is no calorie difference.

"Imitation" on "diet" usually refers to the fact that the animal fat of the regular product has been replaced with vegetable fat. If the product is lower in calories it will say so, either by giving the number of calories per serving or a percentage relationship to the original.

Legislation on labeling of low-calorie foods is still bogged down, Mrs. Wenck reported. One regulation proposed is that a food can only

Women Get New Skills

HALIFAX (CP) — Women living on social assistance now can attend classes in home-making, covering such topics as economical food buying hints, demonstrations on how to prepare food, budgeting, storage of food, sewing and knitting. Joy Johns, welfare officer for neighboring Dartmouth, says she organized the classes "to provide at least some women with ideas and new skills which will enable them to achieve economies in their budgets and at the same time improve the nutritional value of their meals."

Miniskirts Gain Russian Favor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Miniskirts are becoming as popular in Russia as they are in the Western world, says Dr. W. D. Liam Finn, a University of British Columbia lecturer recently returned from a six-month visit to that country. Dr. Finn, who has made four visits to Russia, said he has noticed changes in the attitudes of the people and increases in the quantities of consumer goods.

Eileen, surrounded by all my own familiar belongings, what more could I wish for?

Certainly I would like to take Eileen abroad at some time — perhaps to revisit all my old haunts. I'd love to see London again, and sail up the Rhine as I did in my student days.

But even if this is impossible, I will be happy to end my days here in this flat, with all its peace and calm.

One day soon I hope to go for a drive around the Cape Peninsula, and gaze again at the sea. This is my next target.

COURTENAY — It is not often that a mayor and Century Sam both get “kicked out” of the public gallery in a provincial legislative building, but this is exactly what happened to Mayor George Hobson.

Mayor Hobson and Sid Williams of Courtenay, B.C.'s Century Sam, were observing a sitting in the house at Victoria.

Blushing Mint Begs for Time

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Canadian Mint is embarrassed by its own success.

Its $40 sets of centennial coins, including a special $20 gold piece, were such a sales success that the mint will need another 10 to 12 weeks to complete its major 1967 project.

It has already shipped out between 250,000 and 260,000 of the sets, and has a backlog of orders for 90,000. No new orders are being accepted now; the sales ended last September.

TWO FACTORS

A finance department spokesman said two factors contributed to the inability of the mint to complete shipment by the end of centennial year.

More than 100,000 sets were ordered in September alone, and the total sale went many times beyond an original estimate of 30,000 to 40,000. The 90,000 remaining to be shipped all were ordered in September.

SPECIAL CASES

The department has been awaiting receipt of the special silk-lined morocco leather presentation cases in which the coin sets are sold.

They are manufactured in Montreal from leather from India processed in England, and the manufacturer can only deliver 7,000 to 8,000 cases a week.

Prince Philip's Children

No Color Bar on Royal Banns

LONDON (AP) — A London newspaper quotes Prince Philip as saying he did not think he would mind if one of his children married a colored person.

The Evening Standard also quotes the husband of Queen Elizabeth as saying the choice would be up to the children.

The newspaper says Philip made the remark in a recent television interview. But, it charges, the passage was censored from the program by "a little gentle surgery from Buckingham Palace."

A palace spokesman denied today that the film had been censored by palace officials.

"We had nothing to do with the editing of the film," he said.

"This is done by the television company concerned."

He declined comment on what the prince actually said. The television company, Tyne Tees, had no immediate comment on the newspaper report.

The Evening Standard says an interviewer asked Philip whether he would mind if one of his children married a colored person and adds: "There was a pause, and finally Prince Philip said he didn't think that he would and that anyway, it would be up to them."

The paper says: "Upon subsequent reflection, he felt he had not given a sufficiently robust answer — and since the program had overrun by 30 seconds this part was snipped out."

Lottery in Montreal May Lift Tax Hike

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau announced Tuesday he will balance the city's budget by creating a lottery-like scheme open to citizens of the world.

Drapeau made the announcement during presentation of Montreal's 1968-69 budget. He said a tax increase of 20 per cent would be required without the initiation of the lottery scheme.

The mayor said he hopes the scheme will bring an additional $32,000,000 in revenue—enough to make up the difference between the city's revenue amounting to $247,713,992 and estimated expenditures of $279,713,992.

NEW TAXES

If the city's executive committee finds, at meetings in September and December, that the lottery scheme is not covering the $32,000,000 discrepancy, new taxes will be proposed to council.

While complete details of the "voluntary tax assessment" will be presented to council April 9 for approval, Mayor Drapeau outlined some of the aspects of the scheme:

- On the 20th of each month, 151 prospective winners will be drawn from among persons who contributed at least $2 to the city's director of finance.

• Every $2 contribution entitles a person to receive a tax bill bearing a serial number.

• Candidates whose numbers are picked will be asked a skill-testing question about Montreal.

• Monthly first prize winners will receive $100,000 in each.

• There will be 30 additional prizes of $1,000 each, 20 prizes of $500 and 100 prizes of $100, making the total in monthly cash prizes $150,000.

• The skill-testing questions along with the right answers, will be printed on the back of the tax receipt and will be mailed two days after the director of finance receives an applicant's donation.

• Subscription blanks will be printed shortly in major newspapers and magazines across North America.

Youths Rifle Cash Drawer As Staff Serves Patrons

An 18-year-old youth and his 16-year-old companion pleaded guilty in central magistrate's court Tuesday to stealing $145 from the till Monday at Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 841 Government. Daniel Allan, 18, of no fixed address, and Richard McIvor, 16, of 3014 Craigswan, were both remanded to April 9 for pre-sentence reports. McIvor was raised earlier in the day from juvenile court.

Det. Walter Calwell said Allan and McIvor walked into the store at 11:45 a.m. Monday and while the staff was busy with customers, opened the cash drawer at the rear of the premises.

The two then walked to Douglas Street, where they went to a cafe and counted the money, court was told.

A 50-year-old man who wrote worthless cheques nine successive days — excluding Sunday — was sentenced to one year in jail.

Andrew Robb, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to nine counts of false pretences. The cheques were written between March 13 and 22 at Woodward's and the Bank of Nova Scotia. Court was told the cheques, written on a non-existent bank account, totalled $34. When Magistrate William Ostler was told Robb had been convicted in December on nine counts of false pretences, he said: "Nine seems to be your favorite number."

A motorist who became hostile when arrested on a charge of impaired driving and fought with a city policeman was sentenced to six months in the penitentiary for assaulting Constable Albert Wells.

Keith Lloyd De Wolfe, 25, of 108 Balmoral, pleaded guilty to the assault and to impaired driving for which he was fined $350 or 30 days in jail.

Constable Wells said he attempted to reason with De Wolfe, whom he knew, but a "violent struggle" ensued when De Wolfe was arrested. Constable Wells said he received kicks and blows to the lower body.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said De Wolfe was on parole at the time after being convicted in 1964 of robbery with violence and of forcible confinement. De Wolfe said he had 2½ to three years of the sentence to serve.

What began as a visit to a patient Monday night at St. Joseph's Hospital ended with Raymond Fenwick, 38, of 940 Fullerton, being sentenced to 14 days in jail for causing a disturbance by being drunk.

Fenwick pleaded guilty.

Court was told Fenwick argued with the patient and then was abusive to the hospital staff. Fenwick admitted previous convictions for vagrancy, causing a disturbance and wilful damage.

William Demery, 50, of no fixed address booked into the Empress Hotel Friday night and left the following day owing a bill of $18. He tried then to book in at the hotel the same day under another name.

Demery pleaded guilty to obtaining lodging by fraud and was remanded to Thursday for sentence.

Fined for impaired driving: James Cain, 2132 Lafayette, $400, licence suspended except for business; Gladstone Ryan, 350 Douglas, $350, licence suspended.

Two 20-year-olds who drank beer in a city hotel Feb. 24 were fined $50 each when they pleaded guilty to being minors on licensed premises. Georgina Read, 460 Head, and Ronald Wood, 1702 Belmont, were told the fines were payable immediately under the provincial liquor control act. They had the money.

James Jackson, 22, of Duncan, was fined $50 when he pleaded guilty to consuming liquor in a public place. He drank beer Feb. 24 in a car on Government.

William Adrian, 2219 Oak Bay, was fined $35 for being a minor in possession of liquor.

Fined for careless driving: Robert Marks, 2625 Prior, $50, licence suspended; George Smilowski, 207 Burnside West, $35, licence suspended; Joaquin Martins, 841 Bay, $40; Herbert Newhouse, 607 St. Patrick, $25.

Victoria Enjoyed Less Sun

It was wetter. It was duller. But March was less windy than normal, and turned out to be the warmest March since 1947. And there was no snow.

The mean temperature was 46.7, which was 2.4 degrees above normal and just .6 below 1947.

The maximum temperature of 58.8 degrees, recorded March 20, was .3 above normal and the minimum of 35.1 on March 30 was 3.4 above normal. Minimum temperature on the grass was 28.8, recorded March 9.

The rainfall, at 3.16 inches, was the highest since 1950, when 4.19 inches was recorded. Total precipitation for the month was .92 above normal.

Bright sunshine dropped 39.5 hours below normal to 106.8 hours. Average hourly wind-speed of 10.5 miles an hour was less by 1.4 than normal. Highest average hourly windspeed was clocked at southeast 36 on the 11th and the highest gust of the month was recorded the same day at southeast 54. Gale force winds were reported on three days, the 11th, 15th and 29th.

The year to date — now think carefully — stands as being warmer, wetter, sunnier and less windy than normal.

place to place. The corner of Tuxedo and Quadra is one such place.

Mr. Life said it's impossible to remove the old line economically but the apparent leak is being watched closely and, should it create serious problems, a suitable drain will be installed.

The 16-inch steel watermain from Beaver Lake to the city was installed in 1891 supplementing a 12-inch cast-iron pipe which has been installed in 1874 along Douglas Street.

Except for relatively small sections, the latter main is still being used in Saanich as part of the municipal water distribution system.

In 1909, to supply an increasing demand, portions of the 16-inch main were replaced with 24-inch pipe and a reservoir was constructed on Smith's Hill, within the city's north boundary near Cook Street.

A steam-driven pump was also installed on the 16-inch line at that time and was located on Pump Street just off Quadra, opposite Reynolds Road.

The route of the 16-inch main through Saanich was roughly southeasterly from the filter beds at Beaver Lake, along Pipe Line Road, to West Saanich Road, continuing more or less in a straight line cross country, slightly west of what is now Patricia Bay Highway.

It crossed Douglas near Quadra and continued southeasterly just west of Quadra, crossing it again near Lily. It continued southward along Tuxedo Drive to rejoin Quadra near Ian Street and Saanich Road. From there it followed Quadra to Cook and along Cook into the city.

The pipeline was abandoned in 1915 when the Elk-Beaver supply became inadequate and water from Sooke Lake was piped into the city.

Yarrows Limited shipyard laid off 100 hourly-paid men during March, an official said Thursday.

The employment figure dropped from 425 to 325 at the firm.

The level was described as "the lowest for a few years now."

The latest layoffs came Friday when 10 jobs in the machine shop were closed.

The unemployment scene in the shipbuilding field has been becoming increasingly poor since last fall when the federal government established its austerity program and Victoria Machinery Depot closed its gates Jan. 1.

Five weeks will be spent at Lakefield College School in Lakefield, Ont., and the final week at Carleton University, Ottawa.

A highways department spokesman said "on highway" meant the highway right-of-way, which includes the shoulder and the area up to bordering fences. The new signs apply between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on school days. There is to be a covering section inserted in the Motor Vehicles Act next year.

The signs have had favorable success in the interior and are now being erected in the Fraser Valley and on the Island.

Old System Now Abandoned

Waterworks History Comes to Surface

A trickle of water at Quadra and Tuxedo is about the only reminder above ground of a part of Saanich municipality's waterworks history dating back to 1891.

"Several people have commented on an apparent leaking watermain there," said Municipal Engineer Neville Life this week.

There is an old 16-inch watermain which has been abandoned over the years, he explained, and it collects ground water through pinholes and breaks in the line.

This water travels along the old line and breaks out from

Speed Reduced For Children

The speed limit on a section of the Patricia Bay Highway has been lowered from 50 to 30 to protect school children who live in the Chesterlea subdivision and surrounding areas.

The change came after a request from Saanich council to the highways department, sparked by concerned parents of the area, to lower it to 40 because of the number of children who must cross the highway.

Signs in the Rogers-Lily area now have an additional sign appended to the original one.

Bilingualism Coming In Service

OTTAWA (CP) — "En avant lentement."

This French equivalent of "slow ahead" is to start a destroyer away from her Halifax letty this summer and mark a new bilingual era for Canada's unified services.

Defence Minister Cadieux announced Tuesday that new designations within the forces will mark certain units as predominantly French-speaking or predominantly English-speaking. Where a unit is designated predominantly French, that will be its working language.

JET SQUADRON

A squadron of new CF-5 jet interceptors to be based at Bagotville, Que., would get a similar designation next year.

A new airborne unit to be formed later this year and based outside Quebec province would draw 30 per cent of its strength from personnel whose mother tongue is French and a new French-language trades training school will be set up at St. Johns, Que., Mr. Cadieux added.

The eventual aim is that every unit designated as French will draw 20 per cent of its strength from personnel whose mother tongue is English and vice versa.

TWO-FOLD

Mr. Cadieux said this would give a two-fold effect to the program.

It would make the forces more attractive for French-Canadians and at the same time "open the doors for both English- and French-speaking servicemen to learn a second language."

It will take some time for the 80-20 language split to be put into effect in all forces, Mr. Cadieux said. At present there are only about 16,000 personnel with French as their mother tongue out of a total armed forces strength of better than 100,000.

Service language

Despite the new program, English would remain the effective service language above the unit level. It also would apply as the working language for predominantly French air units while they are in the air because English has been recognized as the effective language for international air traffic control.

At present, new French-Canadian recruits operate in their mother tongue only within the structure of the Royal 22nd Regiment, the sole all-French unit with two battalions at Valcartier, Que., and another in West Germany.

Ottawa First Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — HMCS Ottawa, a helicopter-destroyer based here, will become the first predominantly French-speaking unit in the Canadian naval forces when her crew is recycled Sept. 18, Admiral J. C. O'Brien, Commander of Maritime Command, announced Tuesday.

Admiral O'Brien told a news conference the Ottawa, under her new commander, Cmdr. Pierre Simard, will get a predominantly French-speaking bilingual crew. Ten per cent of the crew members will be English-speaking only to give them an opportunity to learn French.

ENOUGH MEN

The working language on board the destroyer will be French but in communicating with other ships, other forces and bases, English will be used.

Admiral O'Brien said the navy now has enough French-speaking members to man the destroyer, which carries a complement of 11 officers and 198 men, and to provide new crews when the ship is recycled every 16 months.

When a ship is recycled, most of her crew is sent ashore and a new crew is taken on.

FEEL AT HOME

Admiral O'Brien said that with the commissioning of a French-speaking ship, French-speaking sailors will be able to spend their first sea time in an atmosphere in which they feel more at home.

At present, though French-speaking sailors can take their basic training in their own language, they spend their first months at sea in English-speaking ships.

Rural Post Offices Close by Hundreds

OTTAWA (CP) — Rural post offices are being closed down by the hundreds across Canada both as an economy measure and as a means of giving better service.

Village and rural residents who once picked up their mail at private homes where such post offices are located now are served by couriers who not only bring the mail to the door but also sell stamps, pick up parcels and in general act almost as one-man post offices.

The post office department said Tuesday it has closed down 706 rural offices since September, 1965. Another 500 or so will sell their last stamp within the next few years.

The program has made the most headway in Quebec where 171 post offices have been closed. Ontario is next with 133. B.C. has seen 52 closed.

'Shotgun Wedding'

Union Opposed By College

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — "A shotgun wedding by proxy" is the way Dr. Frank MacKinnon, principal of Prince of Wales College, Tuesday described the proposed union of his college with St. Dunstan's University here.

Liberal Premier Alex Campbell's proposal to amalgamate Prince Edward Island's two institutions of higher learning "is a fatal blow to us at Prince of Wales," Dr. MacKinnon said. "We had no official notice it was about to fall."

The premier announced the plan in the legislature Tuesday as an amendment to a bill to set up a university grants commission.

DEMONSTRATIONS

Late last month students and faculty members of PWC held demonstrations to protest establishment of a grants commission, which they claimed would press government jurisdiction on the private rights of the institution.

In the house, Premier Campbell said P.E.I. is one of the few Canadian provinces without such a commission.

There was no immediate comment from the Progressive Conservative opposition, which has two weeks to study the proposed union of the two institutions. The legislature was adjourned Tuesday until April 16.

PRIME MOTIVE

Premier Campbell indicated economic efficiency is the prime motive for integrating 137-year-old St. Dunstan's University, predominantly Roman Catholic, and Prince of Wales College, a non-denominational institution founded in 1834.

The premier left the door open for either institution to continue privately if it wished. There would be no compulsion to unite, but he made it clear the government will not give any money to other than a publicly-owned provincial university.

Spending Cuts Attacked

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — The president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association said Tuesday some indicated cuts in federal spending, such as a possible reduction in Eskimo health services, "simply appall" him.

While criticizing what he called reckless government spending, R. A. Engholm of Toronto said such proposed savings are a glaring example of cuts which are neither needed nor defensible.

Trudeau's Troops Bet on Good Will

These are some of 30 student guides who will act as goodwill ambassadors for Liberal leadership candidate Pierre-Elliott Trudeau during leadership convention in Ottawa this week. Guides, which include young men, will be on hand at railway station and eight hotels.—(CP)

Pearson Hails 'New Era'

QUEBEC (CP) — Lester Pearson says his greatest satisfaction in politics has been to see Canada launched on an "irreversible movement towards a new federalism."

In an exclusive interview in Le Soleil, the prime minister recommends that his successor carry out innovations notably in the formation of the federal cabinet as speedily as possible before he becomes too deeply absorbed by his daily task.

Pearson also said he is satisfied at having "almost completed the structures of social security in the country above all with the pension fund program and having accomplished progress in the area of national unity starting with adoption of a distinctive flag."

The new federalism he envisages calls for an increased decentralization as well as a reform of the senate and the Supreme Court of Canada.

"In short, in 20 years Canada could become one of the greatest and most powerful nations in the world if it is still in existence."

The great disappointments of his political career were the deterioration of the climate in the Commons "in favor of a campaign of personal accusations mud-throwing" and the fact that "I did not succeed very well in coping with this painful situation."

Hopefuls Pick Pretty Girls

OTTAWA (CP) — The nine major candidates for the Liberal party leadership head into a busy schedule today as the first of the 2,476 voting delegates start arriving for the three-day leadership convention, opening Thursday.

More than 20 food-and-drink hospitality suites were set to open in the major downtown hotels. Preparations Tuesday indicated that each candidate was competing to recruit the prettiest girls for his particular location.

IN OFFICES

Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and Transport Minister Paul Hellyer were the only two left on the out-of-town campaign trail Tuesday, both winding up in Montreal.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin and Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp spent at least part of Tuesday in their department offices. Mr. Martin was keeping in close touch with the Vietnam situation from his home Tuesday afternoon and planned a meeting with the Russian ambassador late in the day.

Sharp held a beer-and-sandwiches luncheon reception for the press at his committee rooms, attracting about 100, then went into semi-seclusion for the day.

SPEECH WORK

Health Minister Allan MacEachen was reported by his staff to be "somewhere in the Laurentians" working on speeches. Trade Minister Robert Winters was in "quiet seclusion" somewhere in Ottawa and Consumer Affairs Minister John Turner "out in the country" resting and completing speech scripts.

Agriculture Minister J. J. Greene went to his home in Amqui, 40 miles west, for a quiet day of speech-writing while Eric Kierans, former Quebec Health minister, spent the day relaxing at a private country club in Montebello, Que.

TWO HOTELS

Martin will greet delegates tonight at receptions in the two main hotels. On Thursday the folk-dance troupe Les Feux Follets will entertain at a reception on his behalf and on Friday Mrs. Martin will be hostess at a fashion show for women delegates.

Pentagon Explains as War Foes Cry Foul

From I.A.T., U.P.I., AP

The Johnson administration moved quickly Tuesday to reassert the sincerity of its Vietnam peace gesture, in which President Johnson pledged a halt to air and navy gun attacks on all North Vietnam except an area adjacent to the demilitarized zone.

The pledge was given Sunday. Monday, carrier-based planes struck a target 205 miles north of the demilitarized zone, sparking an outburst of criticism and doubt across the United States and around the world.

Today U.S. navy planes struck far north again, this time 12 miles north of the Monday raid and less than a mile south of the 20th parallel.

This was the reaction to the raids:

● Premier Pham Van Dong of North Vietnam said peace talks with the United States "will begin as soon as the United States has really un-

ditionally stopped bombing and all other acts of war against North Vietnam."

● Senator William Fulbright, a persistent Vietnam critic, said Tuesday in Washington he had been "completely mistaken about the degree of the president's objectives. This is not going to be a significant inducement to peace."

● In Los Angeles former U.S. diplomat John Kenneth Galt said the bombings indicated either that the peace offer was "bogus" or "the military is out of control."

● Communist North Vietnam indicated Johnson's move was not a sufficient de-escalation of the war to produce peace talks.

● Moscow Radio said Johnson was "not sincere" in his order to stop bombing North Vietnam.

● Questions were raised in Washington following Monday's raid as to whether Johnson actually had ordered a significant reduction in the level of U.S. military action.

Phil G. Goulding, assistant secretary of defence for public affairs, said this really was the case.

Kosygin Says

Only Way Out: End Aggression

TEHERAN (LAT) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin said Tuesday that there had come for the United States to understand there was only one way out of Vietnam: "to cease the aggression."

Speaking at a banquet on the first day of his state visit to Iran, the Russian leader gave his first public reaction to the recent measures taken by President Johnson to de-escalate the Vietnam war. Although he did not mention Johnson's latest measures, Kosygin indicated they were not enough. (See also Page 5)

He said that "all the endeavors of the interferences have failed... the time has come for the aggressors to understand that the only way out is to cease aggression."

Deal Rumors Sweep Capital

By RON COLLISTER

OTTAWA, (Special) — Deals, deals and rumors of deals are sweeping the capital as the delegates arrive to choose the next prime minister of Canada.

Otto

Tuesday night, two important candidates, Robert Winters and Paul Martin, were closeted in an office on deserted Parliament Hill.

The meeting was suggested by Martin and took place in Winters' office.

PLAT REJECTION

Winters has flatly rejected the idea of any deals or participation in a move to stop Pierre Trudeau.

Trudeau, in three polls is shown as a strong front-runner on the first ballot.

The talk in some of the rival camps now is intended to establish, well in advance, what strategy to follow, if enough candidates believe Trudeau should be stopped.

CONSENSUS

The common theme is all the stories swamping the capital is that a stop-Trudeau attitude, if not a formal alliance, is developing.

The consensus is that most of the planning is coming from the Martin and Hellyer camps.

As the two men reported to be in second and third place, one

McCarthy Stock Up

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Senator Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota rode the anti-Vietnam war issue to a clear-cut Democratic victory over retiring President Johnson in a prestige-building torrent of votes in Tuesday's Wisconsin presidential preference primary election.

Holding steadily at 55 per cent of the Democratic total as returns mounted, McCarthy won the bulk of the state's 59-vote convention delegation to retain his place as a leader for the nomination Johnson said Sunday night he does not want.

A heavy turnout of Republicans indicated that former vice-president Richard Nixon might top the 339,393 votes he got in the 1960 Wisconsin primary.

NOMINAL FOES

In that year, when he won the party nomination, he was unpopular. In Tuesday's countdown, he had only nominal opposition from Gov. Ronald Reagan of California and perennial candidate Harold E. Stassen, a former Minnesota governor.

Presidential preference primary elections held in various states are for the most part, tests of strength for potential party nominees. The party candidates will be chosen at the Democratic party convention in Chicago Aug. 26-30 and the Republican convention in Miami Aug. 5-9.

With 1,844 of 3,291 precincts counted in the Democratic primary, McCarthy had 289,658 votes, or 55 per cent of the party total; Johnson had 195,280, for 37 per cent.

WELL AHEAD

In the Republican balloting, with 1,831 precincts counted, Nixon had 267,590 or 80 per cent; Reagan 35,894 or 11 per cent; Stassen 19,348, or six per cent.

McCarthy forecast at a news conference that he would wind up with 55 per cent of the vote. He said he considered it "a most significant victory."

Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York, currently McCarthy's chief rival for the

Johnson Moves Swing Public

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A national American market analysis firm claimed Tuesday that President Johnson's decision not to seek re-election, combined with his annual limited de-escalation of the Vietnam war, has caused a major shift in American opinion of his war policy.

A nationwide telephone survey Monday by Sindlinger and Co. shows 75 per cent of those queried now believe Johnson is doing all he can to settle the war, with 11 per cent disagreeing. The rest offered no opinion.

Only days before Johnson's announcement Sunday, the same at-random survey showed that for the first time, more Americans than ever before — 43 per cent of those queried — did not believe Johnson was doing all he could to end the conflict.

At that time, March 23 through 25, 41 per cent believed he was doing all possible.

The Monday poll showed that about 46 per cent of adult Americans would support President Johnson in the November elections if his party could convince him to change his mind about running. More than 31 per cent said they would not support him, and another 22 per cent refused to answer the question.

Albert M. Sindlinger, president of the firm, said the shift in opinion since Johnson's announcement is the "most radical" he has seen during 30 years of opinion research.

Pueblo Letter Spurs Warning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. state department warned Tuesday any move by North Korea toward executing crewmen of the USS Pueblo would be a "deliberate aggravation of an already serious situation."

Carl Bartsch, a state department spokesman, declined to spell out what action the United States might take if North Korea moved toward putting the 82 crewmen on trial for espionage.

LETTER BROADCAST

The latest execution threat was made in a North Korean broadcast earlier Tuesday. The official government radio broadcast a letter allegedly written by Stephen Harris, a research officer aboard the Pueblo, stating that crew members faced a "miserable fate" and might be executed if the United States did not apologize for allegedly violating North Korean waters.

The state department spokesman said the espionage charge could not be justified under any principle of international law or practice.

U.S. Senate Passes Tax Raise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate Tuesday passed the 10 per cent tax increase that president Johnson has been trying to get since last August and tied it to an enforced $6,000,000,000 cut in government spending.

But the income tax increase — Johnson called it a surcharge — must now be approved by the house, whose members show very little more enthusiasm for it than they did when it was proposed.

House Group Urges New Laws

By IAN STREET
Legislative Reporter

The special committee on gasoline prices Tuesday night recommended legislation to protect non-brand dealers and outlaw gimmicks.

Government members on the floor of the House, led by Premier Bennett, shouted a chorus of "nays" when committee chairman Herb Capozzi (SC-Vancouver Centre) asked leave to move adoption of the report.

Three government members, including long-time crusader for lower gasoline prices Cyril Shelford (SC-Omineca), voted with the five opposition members on the committee to recommend legislation. A majority on the 14-member committee also voted to instruct Mr. Capozzi, as chairman, to ask for the rules to be suspended so the report could be adopted without notice, instead of merely tabling it.

Mr. Bennett later indicated the government wanted more time to study the committee's findings, but declined to say when the government might act on it, if at all.

Opposition spokesmen, however, expressed no confidence, and the NDP immediately gave notice that it would propose the report be adopted with an additional provision that a Crown corporation be set up to handle sales of gasoline to independent dealers throughout B.C.

IN DYING HOURS

This motion would normally be brought up after the required two days' notice on Thursday, but is likely to be dealt with among a number of other opposition proposals in the dying hours of the session, probably early next week.

Meanwhile, Mr. Shelford, whose efforts resulted in the appointment of the Morrow Royal Commission on gasoline prices in 1963, said he regarded the committee's report as "a good first step."

The backbencher said he would seek a meeting later today with Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Lottmark, whose department would be responsible, to urge that legislation implementing the committee recommendations be brought in at this session.

This committee report is a lot better than last year's, said

Mayor Not Amused By Town Fool's Grant

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Cmapbell was not amused Tuesday when town fool Joachim Folks pranced merrily into council chambers after winning a $3,500 Canada council grant.

"You might call this the government's mad money," said Mayor Campbell when he learned that the national council had granted money to Folks, who dresses as a jester and amuses Vancouver's townfolk.

"An old-age pensioner, who's worked all his life for his country, gets $1,200 a year. Here's a fellow who refuses to work and they give him a $3,500 young-age pension."

The presidents of two senior pensioners' organizations said they would urge their members to make formal protests about the council grant to the town fool.

"It's the most stupid thing I've ever heard of," said President Vincent Yates of the B.C. Old Age Pensioners' Organization.

President Marguerite Smith of the B.C. Senior Citizens' Association added: "We don't like to complain about every little thing but this is going too far."

Lengthy Daffodil For Flower Child

IT HAD TO HAPPEN: It was a copper-bottomed, safe-as-houses bet that we would get more items about long daffodils. For those who have just joined us, Daisy Walker let us know Sunday she had grown a daffodil 31 inches long.

Tuesday there was a pleasant note from Mrs. Robert Powell, and taped to a yardstick was her effort — just a little better than 37 inches.

Mrs. Powell reports the flower was raised from bulbs that have been in the ground unlifted for 10 years.

Colonist book reviewer E. D. Ward-Harris has the bloom in water and plans to present it to a super-hippie flower-type person.

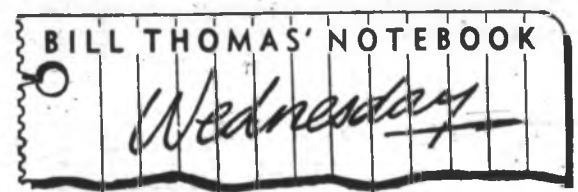

OUR AGENT REPORTS: Underground films are a special art form. To sum up the happenings here over the weekend, Colonist staffer John Hoggins, a keen amateur filmmaker, offers this report.

"Chris Crawley was a happy man Sunday evening. He had launched his first evening of underground films in the Nine in the Fifth Place, and the 2½ hours of experimental movies indicated that their future screenings will have a big following.

"He had expected about 80 to attend, but by the time the first film rolled off the reel, there were something like 150 enthusiasts.

"The program was interesting. The trouble with underground films is that they have acquired a reputation of being nothing more than 'feisty pictures.'

"This is ridiculous. True, Edward Enshwiler's Relativity contained some erotic footage, but it was so tastefully done that it would be difficult for anyone to take offence.

"The most striking thing about the films is their technical accomplishment. Photography, editing and lighting in most were excellent.

"Relativity, for instance, has some of the most lyrical camera work I have seen for a long time. That's the thing about these underground movies. Like modern art and music, even if you don't get the message, you can sit back and enjoy the blending of color and tempo.

"There was a lemon, though. That was David Blenstock's Nothing Happened This Morning. He need not have bothered, for nothing happened in the film, either.

Apart from some skilled editing tricks, the shots of a man getting up, shaving and interlaced impressions of his emotions and thoughts really didn't amount to anything.

"The cinema relies on movement for its purpose, and some of the shots were a regression to the early days of film-making when it hadn't occurred to producers that the camera can be moved from one place to another for different angles.

"The evening was worthwhile even if just for the opportunity of seeing Portrait of Lydia by John Stratton. This was animation at its best. It was a short film but many hours of hard and talented work lay behind it. The audience obviously found it outstanding, for it was the only one which drew spontaneous applause.

"Chris Crawley plans to present a program every second Sunday. He should be congratulated for his initiative. These films will provide an instructive and emotion-packed evening out.

"The audience on Sunday was composed mainly of young people. One can only hope that older people will make the effort to see them. The messages are not for youth alone. Many will doubtless be for everyone.

"The program was also presented on Monday."

LATE NIGHT SCENE: The Old Forge has Judy Ginn back, large as life and twice as beautiful. The new improved sound system was acting up opening night, but it seems safe to predict she will wow the clients for her 14-week stay. She plans to offer complete changes in program as the weeks pass.

The Red Lion has the perennial Eleanor Collins, who is just about the smoothest there is.

Miss Collins makes everything she sings or does seem so easy, and she is a delight to hear. Her material is varied, and her natural warmth fills the room.

The presence of these two talents has put the crowd to the test. They are shutting back and forth to catch the shows, and it's well worth the effort.

Monday only four hours after Johnson spoke.

The president had in his order placed "most of the territory" and 90 per cent of North Vietnam's citizens in a bomb-free zone.

Many, including Fulbright, assumed the president was restricting bombing to a small area immediately north of the demilitarized zone.

It developed that while this was generally so, targets still authorized can reach above Thanh Hoa.

They are targets where, as Johnson said, "the continuing enemy buildup directly threatens allied forward positions and where the movements of their troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat."

Goulding said, however, that so far "90 per cent of the sorties (since Johnson spoke) have been within 60 miles of the zone while only 2.3 per cent were against targets in the Thanh Hoa area."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said Johnson wanted to ban the bombing of North Vietnam about 75 miles south of Hanoi — at the 20th parallel — but was talked out of drawing a specific line by the state department.

Officials of that department felt that by setting a specific limit U.S. fliers would have been unable to attack supply dumps and troop concentrations if the North Vietnamese moved from just across an arbitrary line.

Fulbright appealed to Johnson to "clarify" the language of his bombing order but at the same time added that there had been confirmation that the bombing of the last 48 hours was in line with the order.

"If it doesn't mean anything," he said, "it is only a limited reduction — then it is a very tragic thing because then I don't know how North Vietnam can respond."

"If this opportunity is missed there is no choice but to go all the way down to an 'all-out nuclear war,'" Fulbright said.

The "bogus" protest by Galbraith, Harvard economist and chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action, expressed the dismay and rage of political liberals at the new air strikes.

They also, said Galbraith, believed the president meant an area much closer to the demilitarized zone, and saw in this a step toward de-escalation of the war and a move for peace.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk meanwhile warned U.S. allies in the Far East of "more hard fighting" if North Vietnam ignored or rejected Johnson's peace overture.

In North Vietnamese reaction, London said the Thanh Hoa move came in the official army newspaper Quanh Doi Nhan Dan, according to the Soviet news agency Tass, which said Johnson "is still looking for ways and means of misleading public opinion and does not agree to stop the bombing."

Communist diplomats in Hanoi said the Thanh Hoa raids, 80 miles south of Hanoi, had "gravely prejudiced" the chance of negotiations.

Even Allied diplomats were critical of the raid, terming it ill-timed and ill-advised.

How did the Canadians capture Western Airlines without a struggle?

It was planned that way. Six years before Western began to fly into Vancouver, we sent John Lee to your city as District Sales Manager.

John fell in love with British Columbia and its people.

Later, Canadian Ken Scott, who had been with Western Airlines for 17 years, was appointed our Vancouver Station Manager.

Last year, these men hired a group of friendly, efficient, talented Canadians. To form the nucleus of a team that would serve all of Western Canada out of greater Vancouver.

And now Western offers daily nonstop jet service from Vancouver to Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland. Plus through-jet flights to Las Vegas, San Diego and Phoenix.

Our team (although only a few could break away for this picture) continues to grow.

They're all friendly. All efficient. All talented. And all Canadian.

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: My sister is 48 and has been advised that she has diabetes, following a loss of 30 pounds. She was not obese to begin with, and this loss has left her quite thin. Yet I understood that diabetes was prevalent in overweight people. She is not taking diabetes tablets. How long does it take for diabetes to be under control and will it be possible for her to regain some of this weight despite no sweets in her diet?—N.R.

It is true that many diabetics have been overweight prior to discovering their disorder, but that does not mean that only obese people get diabetes.

Whether the obesity is principally a contributing factor, or whether it is partly a result of a tendency to develop diabetes is somewhat beside the point.

Your Good Health

Perhaps it may be a combination.

Loss of weight is one symptom of diabetes, but not one of the early symptoms. Your sister doubtless had other symptoms, such as thirst, urinary frequency, and perhaps others, without recognizing their significance.

Anyway, the disease is characterized by an inability to utilize sugar, and sugar "spills over" into the urine and is lost. These lost calories partly explain the loss of weight in an uncontrolled case of diabetes. When your sister's case is finally under control, she may well gain back some of the weight she lost—I have known instances in which a patient, with the diabetes controlled, gained as much as a pound a day for a time.

However, plumpness or corpulence are not synonymous with health so — guided by her physician — your sister may or may not find it to her advantage to regain all her lost 30 pounds. Rather, renewed strength and vigor are the important considerations.

How long does it take to achieve control? Impossible to say in advance, because it depends on the individual's characteristics, the time that has passed before treatment started, and how well the patient follows instructions.

School Work Bids Stagger Trustees

PORT ALBERNI—Tenders for work required by the fire marshal at Alberni Elementary School stunned school trustees Monday by showing up almost one third higher than estimated. Budget plans had allowed $57,000 for changes required to comply with fire regulations but tenders as high as almost $79,000 were received.

Building and sites committee chairman Bill Beckingham commented: "There is certainly something wrong here. We can't accept the lowest tender in this case."

The low bid was $17,000 higher than the estimate.

They referred it back to the committee for further study.

Phil's Fans Foul Peaceful Trip

COURTENAY — It is not often that a mayor and Century Sam both get "kicked out" of the public gallery in a provincial legislative building, but this is exactly what happened to Mayor George Hobson.

Mayor Hobson and Sid Williams of Courtenay, B.C.'s Century Sam, were observing a sitting in the house at Victoria.

Seated beside them were a number of supporters of ex-Highways Minister Phil Gaglardi. The supporters disrupted proceedings in such a way that they were forcibly removed from the gallery. Mayor Hobson and Mr. Williams were also forced to leave.

"We were rudely ushered out of the house," the mayor said with a smile.

Summons For Official

DUNCAN — A magistrate has decided there is enough evidence to issue a summons to the district superintendent of schools to answer a charge under the Public Schools Act.

Magistrate Lance Heard heard testimony to decide whether there was sufficient evidence to issue a summons to Superintendent Art Jones of Duncan.

Magistrate Heard said, "There is sufficient evidence to issue the summons."

Last week, Kenneth Hasanen, a former district school teacher, laid a complaint against Mr. Jones under Section 127 of the Public Schools Act.

The section reads, "Any person who disturbs, interrupts or disquiets any school or by rude or indecent behavior or by making a noise... is guilty of an offence against this act and is liable to a fine not exceeding $50."

Mr. Hasanen gave evidence on the classroom incident which led to the laying of the complaint.

The teacher was dismissed by the Cowichan School Board after the incident, and the decision was upheld by the board of referees and the provincial cabinet.

The public hearing before the board of referees was conducted in January following the incident at the Cowichan Secondary School, Oct. 16, 1967, when Mr. Hasanen refused to carry on teaching when Mr. Jones entered the classroom.

Mystery Light Reported

PORT ALBERNI — Alberni Valley Rescue Squad stood by Tuesday morning after a light was reported high in the mountains in the Franklin River district.

It was seen by Larry Seabee, a grader operator with the Franklin River Division of MacMillan Bluedel.

There have been numerous reports since March 1 of objects which could be the sea-plane which disappeared on a trip from the Vernon area with Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Brock, their son and young

A company report indicated that broken trees in the area was due to normal wind damage. There has been no explanation of the light.

It was hoped that an air sea rescue helicopter would be able to make a full search shortly.

Trade Fees Jump Under New Law

COURTENAY — Increases in trade licence fees will affect most Courtenay businessmen if an amendment to the bylaw is passed by city council.

The chairman of the finance committee, Ald. Dan Woodrow, said the increases would mean an additional $10,300 in revenue over the year.

This would be allocated for additional off-street parking, street decorations and other projects beneficial to the city. Total revenue from trade licences would be $26,328 over the year.

Ald. Woodrow said, "I think the increases are very fair, perhaps too fair if I can say this."

Alderman Woodrow gave notice that he would introduce an amendment to the trade licence bylaw at the next council meeting.

Some of the increases outlined, for a six month period, were: real estate from $10 to $25; drug stores $30 to $50; radio station, $10 to $50; garages with sales and freight services, $25 to $50; banks from $100 to $200; wholesalers, $25 to $40; Overwaitea, $150 to $175; Super Valu and Safeway, $150 to $200 and apartments and motels per unit raised from 50 cents to $1.

Comox Valley Groups Plan Three Holidays

COURTENAY — A Mile of Nickels campaign, to be held in early May, will be used as a money-making event by the July 1 Committee in Courtenay.

The July 1 Committee is busy preparing a long list of events for this year's celebrations in Courtenay.

Some of the events include sky-diving, a river parade in addition to the annual street parade, a car gymkhana, a marathon walk and golfing.

Further plans towards making the celebrations the best so far, will be made at a meeting at the tourist bureau on April 8.

Mrs. Myrtle Vickberg, who is president of the July 1 Committee, said youth is taking a big part in the celebrations.

The committee has estimated its cost at a minimum of $3,000 including prizes, advertising and insurance.

While Courtenay plans its big day, Cumberland and Comox are also busy with plans for May 24 and Comox Day celebrations.

The holiday weekend in Cumberland will see a bigger and better parade, and bigger prizes being offered.

Col. K. C. Lett, base commander, CFB Comox, will take the salute when a parade moves past the saluting base in front of the Legion Hall.

Regular meeting of the Comox Day Committee will be held as needed in Comox.

Comox Valley Lions are sponsoring the annual summer event.

Many of the activities enjoyed in the past such as water races, crowning of the queen, sports and the Royal Canadian Navy Cadets Sunset Ceremony, are expected to be repeated this year.

'Let's Make Them Proud Again'

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — How can you bring out the full potential of Indian children?

R. J. Durante, principal of Eighth Avenue School believes he has the answer. With the help of his friend, George Clutesi, Indian author and artist, he has started a class which he hopes will pave the way to providing Indian children.

Mr. Clutesi is teaching them the best part of their own culture — not in the impersonal, scientific terms of the anthropology, but warmly as he himself learned through stories, legends and small artifacts.

Slow Pupils

Mr. Durante had always been puzzled by the fact that Indian children with average intelligence creep through school without reaching the heights of which many are fully capable. Many have good scholastic records go out into the world and achieve nothing more than a bare existence.

Mr. Durante grew up close to a local reserve and counts many Indians among his friends and acquaintances.

He has been concerned that the youngsters "who during recess are full of mischief and enthusiasm sit mute and unresponsive in class."

Many Afraid

"Many of them are almost afraid of their own voices in class," he said. "We must try to rekindle their confidence in themselves. We must give them the urge to compete. They must know something of their heritage and we must make them proud again."

Clutesi with small, excited friends

The idea for a solution to the problem came from an unexpected source. Last fall, a troupe of Indian dancers trained by Mr. Clutesi, danced at Eighth Avenue.

"The dancers were wonderfully well received by both the teachers and the pupils," said Mr. Durante. "Everyone was thrilled by them. Some of the students involved in the native dancing were pupils at our school. They were proud, and their classmates were proud of them after the performance," he said.

The pride and improved morale were infectious. Every Indian youngster in the school felt the effects, proud that young people of their race had provided something of interest and enjoyment which their fellow students could not give.

Pilot Plan

But the dancing lasted only an hour, and after a couple of weeks the interest and enthusiasm died away. The old disinterest crept back. The spirit had been smothered again.

Now every Wednesday Mr. Clutesi arrives at the school about the middle of the noon hour, and the children love every minute of his visit. He spends the first hour with Indian pupils from Grades 1 to 3, and the final hour with the older children.

So far, the education office provides its blessing on the pilot project, but that is all. However, even as an unpaid volunteer Mr. Clutesi is delighted with the opportunity to participate in the class.

"It was not as easy as it looked at first," Mr. Clutesi admitted. "First I had to gain the youngsters' confidence before I could help them try to rediscover themselves, and awaken this sleeping pride in their heritage, and through it, in themselves."

Sent Rush

The younger the children, the more responsive they are, Mr. Clutesi has found. Now there is a skirmish to see who gets the seat closest to teacher, although at first, the children stayed as far as possible from this strange man who was supposed to teach them something as strange as trigonometry would be.

The lesson begins with reading a little from Mr. Clutesi's book of Tse-Shaht legends, Son of Raven, Son of Deer. Then they talk about it and discuss the Indian names of the characters. It ends with 15 minutes learning the Indian language.

After half a year, the success of the class is not yet clearly defined. "To soon to tell," says Mr. Durante.

After 17 years as a teacher, 15 of them as a principal, he no longer expects miracles. But he is so convinced his approach is right that he does not like to hear the word experimental used in connection with it.

Story Time

Mr. Clutesi has been heartened by the desire of some of his young pupils to become story-tellers. One little girl, who never ventured a word in school, has surprised and delighted him by telling her stories before his class.

Mr. Durante's hopes for the future do not stop with the native children.

Mr. Durante, who has 26 teachers in the 23-room school, with more than 700 pupils, hopes eventually Indian students who know their legends well, and relate them effectively, will be able to go around to other classrooms and tell the stories to white youngsters.

Mr. Clutesi also has faith in the ultimate achievements of the new program, but feels it must have greater school board support to be truly effective.

dump, said rats must be eliminated first. He was told by both Ald. Bill Hunter and Engineer Art Leynard that a poisoning program has already started.

Council heard a letter sent on behalf of Nanaimo Disposal Services Limited, which outlined their offer to operate the service.

The company suggested collection rates of $1.50 a dwelling unit and purchase of the street sweeper, which would then be operated at a charge of $1,750 a month.

A request for use of the city coat of arms, by the chamber of commerce was discussed.

The chamber is considering sponsorship of the Coin Club, which hopes to strike a coin to be sold by city merchants, with proceeds to go to the tourist bureau.

The Coin Club asked to use the coat of arms for this year, commemorating the bathtub race. It would use a Bastion symbol in subsequent years.

Ald. Gertrude Hall said, "I would like to know if there has been established a policy for the use of the city's coat of arms."

"Is the coat of arms kept for a higher level than entertainment?"

"I can see the Bastion use, but I'm not too sure about the coat of arms."

Council felt a policy must be established.

Mayor Ney commended fellow realtor Mladin Zorkin for suggestion that the city purchase the nine lots on Wallace Street owned by the Sisters of St. Ann, to be used for a parking area.

The city found limited funds prohibited purchase.

Mayor Ney said, "It is things like this that often help us to solve our problems." in acknowledging Dr. Zorkin's efforts.

Island Trustees Debate Research Unit

By BILL STAVDAL

Vancouver Island school boards will consider establishing a centre for co-ordinating educational research, following a weekend meeting in Victoria.

The proposal was made by A. J. Longmore, assistant district superintendent for Greater Victoria, at a meeting of the Island branch of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

The centre would be operated in conjunction with the University of Victoria, said Mr. Longmore.

The university has offered office space and equipment for one year, he said.

Mr. Longmore's proposal called on 14 school districts and their teachers' associations to contribute a total of $3,700 toward stenographic help and office expenses.

The project would be an expansion of the small LEARN program now operating on the south Island. LEARN stands for Laboratory for Education Advancement, Research and Needs.

Right now, said Mr. Longmore, teachers attempting innovations in the classroom are often repeating the mistakes made by others because there is no co-ordination.

The trustees made no decision at their meeting, but took the proposal home for consideration at board meetings.

In other business, the Island branch voted to ask the B.C. School Trustees' Association to gather information on school construction costs throughout the province, and prepare a report for member school districts.

Next meeting of the branch will be held in Campbell River in June.

Cowichan school districts are among the 15.

The trustees elected George Curran of the Greater Victoria board as Island co-ordinator in next fall's salary negotiations with teachers.

Next meeting of the branch will be held in Campbell River in June.

Pentagon Explains as War Foes Cry Foul

From LAT, UPI, AP

The Johnson administration moved quickly Tuesday to reassert the sincerity of its Vietnam peace gesture, in which President Johnson pledged a halt to air and navy gun attacks on all North Vietnam except an area adjacent to the demilitarized zone.

ing an outburst of criticism and doubt across the United States and around the world.

Today U.S. navy planes struck far north again, this time 12 miles north of the Monday raid and less than a mile south of the 20th parallel.

This was the reaction to the raids:

● Premier Pham Van Dong of North Vietnam said peace talks with the United States "will begin as soon as the United States has really unconditionally stopped bombing and all other acts of war against North Vietnam."

● Senator William Fulbright, a persistent Vietnam critic, said Tuesday in Washington he had been "completely mistaken about the degree of the president's objectives. This is not going to be a significant inducement to peace."

● In Los Angeles former U.S. diplomat John Kenneth Galbraith said the bombings indicated either that the peace offer was "bogus" or "the military is out of control."

● Communist North Vietnam indicated Johnson's move was not a sufficient de-escalation of the war to produce peace talks.

● Moscow Radio said Johnson was "not sincere" in his order to stop bombing North Vietnam.

● Questions were raised in Washington following Monday's raid as to whether Johnson actually had ordered a significant reduction in the level of U.S. military action.

Phil G. Goulding, assistant secretary of defence for public affairs, said this really was the case.

Kosygin Says

Only Way Out: End Aggression

TEHERAN (LAT) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin said Tuesday that the time had come for the United States to understand there was only one way out of Vietnam: "to cease the aggression."

Speaking at a banquet on the first day of his state visit to Iran, the Russian leader gave his first public reaction to the recent measures taken by President Johnson to de-escalate the Vietnam war. Although he did not mention Johnson's latest measures, Kosygin indicated they were not enough. (See also Page 5)

He said that "all the endeavors of the interferences have failed... the time has come for the aggressors to understand that the only way out is to cease aggression."

Deal Rumors Sweep Capital

By RON COLLISTER

OTTAWA, (Special) — Deals, deals and rumors of deals are sweeping the capital as the delegates arrive to choose the next prime minister of Canada.

Otto

'Ethnic' Caucus Raised

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP has arranged a special caucus of Liberal convention delegates who are of neither French nor English extraction to discuss the question of special status for any group in Canada.

Steve Otto (York East) told a news conference Tuesday he has won approval of convention organizers to hold the caucus Thursday at 3 p.m. PST in the Coliseum, next door to the civic centre site of the convention.

He said he has obtained the names of about 250 delegates with "ethnic" names and expects 120-130 to respond to his caucus call. He is sending them this dear-delegate letter:

DESTINY ISSUE

"Of paramount importance to us is the issue of our national destiny. Shall we be one nation or two? Shall any group of Canadians be granted special status, and if so, what shall be the quality of that privilege?"

"Many of us are of the opinion that this vital question begs a clear stand from this convention and therefore, since your views on this are very important, I would be honored if you could attend a special meeting in this regard, to take part in our deliberations."

CANDIDATES WELCOME

Otto told reporters none of the leadership candidates will be invited to the caucus. However they or their representatives are welcome to attend "as observers."

He had personally questioned the "concept of two nations, special status" and in recent months had addressed ethnic organizations across Canada and sought their views.

Tuesday night, two important candidates, Robert Winters and Paul Martin, were closeted in an office on deserted Parliament Hill.

FLAT REJECTION

Winters has flatly rejected the idea of any deals or participation in a move to stop Pierre Trudeau.

Trudeau, in three polls is shown as a strong front-runner on the first ballot.

The talk in some of the rival camps now is intended to establish, well in advance, what strategy to follow, if enough candidates believe Trudeau should be stopped.

CONSENSUS

The common theme in all the stories swamping the capital is that a stop-Trudeau attitude, if not a formal alliance, is developing.

The consensus is that most of the planning is coming from the Martin and Hellyer camps.

As the two men reported to be in second and third place, one

House Group Urges New Laws

By IAN STREET
Legislative Reporter

The special committee on gasoline prices Tuesday night recommended legislation to protect non-brand dealers and outlaw gimmicks.

Government members on the floor of the House, led by Premier Bennett, shouted a chorus of "nays" when committee chairman Herb Capozzi (SC-Vancouver Centre) asked leave to move adoption of the report.

Three government members, including long-time crusader for lower gasoline prices Cyril Shelford (SC-Omineca), voted with the five opposition members on the committee to recommend legislation. A majority on the 14-member committee also voted to instruct Mr. Capozzi, as chairman, to ask for the rules to be suspended so the report could be adopted without notice, instead of merely tabling it.

Mr. Bennett later indicated the government wanted more time to study the committee's findings, but declined to say when the government might act on it, if at all.

Opposition spokesmen, however, expressed no confidence, and the NDP immediately gave notice that it would propose the report be adopted with an additional provision that a Crown corporation be set up to handle sales of gasoline to independent dealers throughout B.C.

IN DYING HOURS

This motion would normally be brought up after the required two days' notice on Thursday, but is likely to be dealt with among a number of other opposition proposals in the dying hours of the session, probably early next week.

Meanwhile, Mr. Shelford, whose efforts resulted in the appointment of the Morrow Royal Commission on gasoline prices in 1963, said he regarded the committee's report as "a good first step."

The backbencher said he would seek a meeting later today with Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Lofmark, whose department would be responsible to urge that legislation implementing the committee's recommendations be brought in at this session.

"This committee report is a lot better than last year's," said

Mayor Not Amused By Town Fool's Grant

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell was not amused Tuesday when town fool Joachim Folke pranced merrily into council chambers after winning a $3,500 Canada council grant.

"You might call this the government's mad money," said Mayor Campbell when he learned that the national council had granted money to Folke, who dresses as a jester and amuses Vancouver's townfolk.

"An old-age pensioner, who's worked all his life for his country, gets $1,200 a year. Here's a fellow who refuses to work and they give him a $3,500 young-age pension."

The presidents of two senior pensioners' organizations said they would urge their members to make formal protests about the council grant to the town fool.

"It's the most stupid thing I've ever heard of," said President Vincent Yates of the B.C. Old Age Pensioners' Organization.

President Marguerite Smith of the B.C. Senior Citizens' Association added: "We don't like to complain about every little thing but this is going too far."

MCCARTHY STOCK UP

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Senator Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota rode the anti-Vietnam war issue to a clear-cut Democratic victory over retiring President Johnson in a prestige-building torrent of votes in Tuesday's Wisconsin presidential preference primary election.

Holding steadily at 55 per cent of the Democratic total as returns mounted, McCarthy won the bulk of the state's 59-vote convention delegation to retain his place as a leader for the nomination. Johnson said Sunday night he does not want.

A heavy turnout of Republicans indicated that former vice-president Richard Nixon might top the 339,393 votes he got in the 1960 Wisconsin primary.

NOMINAL FOES

In that year, when he won the party nomination, he was unopposed. In Tuesday's countdown, he had only nominal opposition from Gov. Ronald Reagan of California and perennial candidate Harold E. Stassen, a former Minnesota governor.

Presidential preference primary elections held in various states are, for the most part, tests of strength for potential party nominees. The party candidates will be chosen at the Democratic party convention in Chicago Aug. 26-30 and the Republican convention in Miami Aug. 5-9.

With 1,844 of 3,291 precincts counted in the Democratic primary, McCarthy had 289,658 votes, or 55 per cent of the party total; Johnson had 195,280, for 37 per cent.

WELL AHEAD

In the Republican balloting, with 1,831 precincts counted, Nixon had 267,590 or 80 per cent; Reagan 35,894 or 11 per cent; Stassen 19,348, or six per cent.

McCarthy forecast at a news conference that he would wind up with 55 per cent of the vote. He said he considered it "a most significant victory."

Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York, currently McCarthy's chief rival for the

Johnson Moves Swing Public

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A national American market analysis firm claimed Tuesday that President Johnson's decision not to seek re-election, combined with his announced limited de-escalation of the Vietnam war, has caused a major shift in American opinion of his war policy.

A nationwide telephone survey taken Monday by Sindlinger and Co. shows 75 per cent of those queried now believe Johnson is doing all he can to settle the war, with 11 per cent disagreeing. The rest offered no opinion.

Only days before Johnson's announcement Sunday, the same at-random survey showed that for the first time, more Americans than ever before — 43 per cent of those queried — did not believe Johnson was doing all he could to end the conflict.

At that time, March 23 through 25, 41 per cent believed he was doing all possible.

The Monday poll showed that about 46 per cent of adult Americans would support President Johnson in the November elections if his party could convince him to change his mind about running. More than 31 per cent said they would not support him, and another 22 per cent refused to answer the question.

Albert M. Sindlinger, president of the firm, said the shift in opinion since Johnson's announcement is the "most radical" he has seen during 30 years of opinion research.

Bill 33 Hurdles Last Big Barrier

The government's controversial Bill 33 passed its last major hurdle in the legislature Tuesday night as the proposed Mediation Act was approved after lengthy clause-by-clause debate in committee.

Because several sections were amended within the general framework of the bill, third reading wasn't given immediately. When the vote is finally taken in the next few days both the NDP and Liberals are expected to oppose its passage, but approval is already assured.

The major change in the bill allows the mediation commission to publish a minority report.

SIX HOURS

The committee stage, which took six hours Monday night up to adjournment of the House at 2.25 a.m. and continued for a further hour and quarter Tuesday night, had little of the fire shown in earlier debate.

The hottest exchange Tuesday night came on Section 51, which sets $1,000 penalties for individuals and $10,000 for trade unions or employers who contravene provisions of the act.
